Truman Calls On Trainmen To End Strike Immediately

3 Union Station Crews Reported Ready to Return To Jobs Today

BULLETIN

At Union Station early this morning it was reported that three daylight crews would be back at work immediately. Indications were that the rest of the men would be on the job during the day.

At Battle Creek, Mich., 80 switchmen of the Grand Trunk responded to pleas of union officers and began reporting for duty.

President Truman called on striking railroad yard trainmen last night to return to work "immediately."

As the President in a last-minute addition to his radio speech cited the strike as "a danger to the security of our Nation," there were some indications that his words would be heeded in a back-to-work movement early today.

Mr. Truman said the wildcat work stoppage is "an unlawful strike that has partially paralyzed our railroad system."

He said it "is interfering with the movement of troops; it is holding up equipment for our fighting forces, and our civilian population has begun to suffer."

Before the President spoke, a Federal judge in Chicago ordered the trainmen to appear in court and show why they should not be held in contempt.

Truman made an appeal to strikers to "aaccept an individual responsibility for the good of the country."

As "commander in chief" of the armed forces in "this time of danger," he urged that "the union and its striking members return to work immediately."

"I ask you men who are on strike to realize that no matter how serious you believe your grievances are, nothing can excuse the fact that you are adding to your country's danger," he added.

More than 10,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen—conductors, brakemen, and switchmen—reported in "sick" yesterday at train-switching yards of 13 cities tieing up the movement of freight, including war materials being shipped to Korea, Christmas mail, and Railway Express packages.

As a result, embargoes have been placed on freight, mail, and Railway Express shipments in and around the affected rail centers, as the railroad yards and stations piled up with hundreds of tons of Yule packages and mail, and thousands of freight cars.

The wildcat walkout began Monday in Birmingham, Ala.,

Sampler, Gray Also Unwanted

Building Trades Council Bars Ex-Red Thomas as Delegate

The Washington Building Trades Council, area association of AFL construction craft unions, yesterday expelled Henry Thomas, president of Building Laborers Local 74, as a delegate.

The Building Trades Council informed the laborers' unions that in recent testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities Thomas, along with two other officials of Local 74, "branded themselves as Communists and perjurers."

The other two officials are Tom Sampler, secretary-treasurer of Local 74, and William Gray, business agent. Sampler and Gray are not delegates to the Building Trades Council, nor will they be accepted as such—according to the executive board of the Building Trades Council.

Thomas, Sampler and Gray were among the half dozen members of a Communist cell which seized control of the 3000-member Local 74 early in 1949. All three have since broken with the Communist Party, and have had a falling out among themselves.

The Building Trades Council serves as a spokesman and liaison for most of the AFL crafts in the local construction industry.

The council's executive board yesterday declared that the past actions of Thomas, Sampler and Gray were "unpardonable," and added:

"In view of the shadow cast on the labor movement as a whole, nothing they might do or say could ever restore them to the respect they formerly enjoyed."

Action by the AFL group followed by a day a demand by the Construction Contractors Council, which speaks for the management side of the industry, that Thomas be removed as a trustee over welfare funds, else the contractors would stop making their $10,000 a week payment into the funds.

Meanwhile Leo Nazdin, president of Laborers District Council, which is made up of seven laborers locals, including No. 74, yesterday declared that his council felt "immensely relieved" that the Communist situation in Local 74 has "at long last come to light."

Congress GOP Asks Ouster Of Acheson

Lack of Confidence Registered by House, Senate Republicans

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate and House Republicans yesterday overwhelmingly called for the replacement of Secretary of State Dean Acheson in separate party caucuses.

Almost identical resolutions adopted by the two groups charged "lack of confidence" in Acheson and demanded "a thorough housecleaning" in the State Department.

Senate Republicans approved the resolution 23 to 5 following a more than two-hour wrangle. House Republicans acted earlier by voice vote. House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., (Mass.) described the House vote as overwhelming although "several" Republicans dissented.

Democratic leaders and some Republicans promptly condemned the action as a "tragic mistake" and a blow to national unity in time of crisis.

Neither the White House nor State Department commented immediately. Secretary Acheson, slated to leave at 12:30 p. m. Sunday aboard the Presidential plane Independence for Atlantic Pact talks in Brussels, said after the elections that he had no intention of resigning.

The Republican move for his ouster recalled the only striking parallel in history—Republican demands for the scalp of Secretary Seward in the Civil War winter of 1862-63.

Seward actually prepared his resignation after 31 of the 32 Republican Senators joined the "get Seward" movement. President Lincoln called the Republicans into a dramatic Cabinet session and turned down their demands, saying he wouldn't accept Senate dictation.

Yesterday's GOP caucus action followed a pin-pointed Re-

House Refuses D. C. $337,500 For Defense

Commissioners' Plea For Fund Rejected; Senate Backing Sought

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The House yesterday decided no more District money is to be spent now for civilian defense of the Nation's Capital.

It followed the lead of its Appropriations Committee in refusing to provide any of the $337,500 requested by the District Commissioners to get the civilian defense program rolling.

District officials said they hoped the Senate might restore at least in part the civilian defense funds.

The recommendation against House approval of additional civilian defense funds for the present was initiated by the District Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.).

The group reported it is "most desirous" of granting funds as soon as possible. But it said at present "a sound plan is not available."

"Rather, there exists an uncoordinated group of ideas, some of which were evolved into a budget estimate and submitted as part of a civil defense plan.

"This is no reflection on the present acting director of civilian defense, but stems from the fact that the Commissioners have not seen fit to delegate the necessary authority to a director to formulate a sound plan."

The report also suggested that further District budget requests be held up until Congress has enacted general civilian defense legislation and the District can key its own "prudent plan" into the over-all civil defense program.

Acting District Engineer Commissioner Thomas J. Hayes, 3d, said the Commissioners so far have been unable to find a qualified permanent civil defense director who will take the job.

2 U. S. Platoons Cut Off; Chinese Climb on Tanks, Claw at Hatches

TOKYO (Saturday), Dec. 16 (AP). — Chinese Communists smashed at the Allied beachhead in northeast Korea Friday and Friday night in an assault aimed at annihilating the United States Tenth Corps or driving it into the sea.

The western Korean front north of Seoul remained in a two-weeks lull, but the United States Eighth Army there braced to meet an expected attack. Massive Chinese Red forces were reported moving south above the thirty-eighth parallel, headed for the Eighth Army's right (inland) flank.

In the raging battle in the northeast, the first wave of Chinese overran American outposts on the Hamhung-Kungnam defense perimeter.

The outposts were abandoned, but two American platoons—possibly 80 to 100 men—were cut off.

Late Friday night the bark of guns indicated the surrounded Americans were still fighting.

The Reds' opening blow was a fanatical smash against the west rim of the narrow northeast beachhead by 2500 Chinese—the vanguard of a force estimated up to 112,000.

The U. S. Tenth Corps has been roughly estimated to number 60,000.

The attackers quickly swarmed about the two frontline American platoons.

Tanks that tried to rescue the surrounded men were forced back by great numbers of Chinese who sprang upon the sides and tops, clawed at the natches with bare hands and tried to hit the tank crews with small arms.

The Reds paid a great price for this.

Uncounted hundreds died under the fire of American artillery, fighter planes and machine guns.

The Reds halted their attack momentarily. Then they began moving fresh infantry and cavalrymen, the latter on rugged little Manchurian ponies, toward the beachhead from the west and southwest.

Staff officers of the United States Third Infantry Division said they expected the new assault would be aimed at Chigyong, about seven miles west of Hamhung.

They estimated the force grouping for the attack at 25,000, making up three fresh divisions.

Allied artillery pounded the Red staging area, and Communist mortar shells burst in the Allied defense line area late Friday night.

Doughboys crouched in snowy foxholes to meet the major attack. Their officers said they could stop anything the Chinese could throw against them.

The beachhead was the last toe-

Measure Raising Previous Goals Voted in Spite of Military Caution

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Quick House approval was given yesterday to a $17,809,304,424 defense spending bill launching a big but measured buildup of the armed forces.

The partial mobilization measure went through amid expressed Congressional doubts that we were not "moving fast enough" and while the White House apparently was raising expansion goals set by the Pentagon.

For once, it was the Nation's military chiefs who were urging that we not "try to go too fast," with civilian officials arguing for more speed.

New Weapons Sought

The second supplemental appropriation bill, passed by the House by voice vote, will raise the armed forces to 2,766,022 officers and men by next spring. It will provide for 16 Army divisions, an expanded Navy, and 68 Air Force groups in being, with a buildup toward 84 groups. Bulk of the funds will go for new weapons for the Army and other services — to enlarge munitions production capacity and provide most of the equipment for an armed force of at least three million.

It does not provide for as much manpower as some had anticipated, and accounts of hearings released with the approval of the measure were filled with arguments from top Pentagon officials against trying to put men into uniform too fast.

Indeed, even as the money bill reached the House floor, a Pentagon spokesman told of plans to reach a three-million-man goal by next summer and said there were no plans at present to call up additional National Guard divisions. He said there might be another supplemental defense bill of from two to five billions this year, but probably no more.

Truman Raises Sights

Nine hours later, President Truman told the American people that we will build up to 3,500,000 men in the armed forces by summer and announced that two National Guard divisions will be called to duty this winter.

There was no immediate explanation of this sudden raising of the sights, but apparently it was a last-moment decision by top officials of the Government.

Chairman George Mahon (D., Tex.) of the House Appropriations Committee explained Pentagon opposition to a much bigger manpower mobilization during the hearings of the past two weeks in a speech on the bill.

"To throw five million additional men into uniform overnight in a full scale military manpower effort, without adequate weapons to train and fight with and with-

Text of President's Address

Following is the text of President Truman's address:

I am talking to you tonight about what our country is up against, and what we are going to do about it.

Our homes, our Nation, all the things we believe in, are in great danger. This danger has been created by the rulers of the Soviet Union.

For five years we have been working for peace and justice among nations. We have helped to bring the free nations of the world together in a great movement to establish a lasting peace. Against this movement for peace, the rulers of the Soviet Union have been waging a relentless attack. They have tried to undermine or overwhelm the free nations, one by one. They have used threats and treachery and violence.

In June, the forces of Communist imperialism broke into open warfare in Korea. The United Nations moved to put down this act of aggression and, by October, had all but succeeded.

Then, in November, the Communists threw their Chinese armies into the battle against the free nations.

By this act, they have shown that they are now willing to push the world to the brink of a general war to get what they want. This is the real meaning of the events that have been taking place in Korea.

That is why we are in such grave danger.

The future of civilization depends on what we do—on what we do now, and in the months ahead.

We have the strength and we have the courage to overcome the danger that threatens our country. We must act calmly, wisely, and resolutely.

Here are the things we will do:

First, we will continue to uphold, and if necessary to defend with arms, the principles of the United Nations—the principles of freedom and justice.

Second, we will continue to work with the other free nations to strengthen our combined defenses.

Third, we will build up our own Army, Navy and Air Force, and make more weapons for ourselves and our allies.

Fourth, we will expand our economy and keep it on an even keel.

Now, I want to talk to you about each one of these things.

First: We will continue to uphold the principles of the United Nations.

We have no aggressive purpose. We will not use our strength for aggression. We are a tolerant and restrained people, deeply aware of our moral responsibilities and deeply aware of the horrors of war.

We believe in settling differences by peaceful means, and we have made honest efforts to bring about disarmament. We will continue those efforts, but we cannot yield to aggression.

Though the present situation is highly dangerous, we do not believe that war is inevitable. There is no conflict between the legitimate interests of the free world and those of the Soviet Union that cannot be settled by peaceful means. We will continue to take every honorable step we can to avoid a general war.

But we will not engage in appeasement.

The world learned from Munich that security cannot be bought by appeasement.

We are ready, as we have always been, to take part in efforts to reach a peaceful solution of the conflict in Korea. Representatives at Lake Success are taking part in just such efforts today.

We do not yet know whether the Chinese Communists are willing to enter into honest negotiations to settle the conflict in Korea. If negotiations are possible, we shall strive for a settlement that will make Korea a united, independent and democratic country. That is what the Korean people want, and that is what the United Nations has decided they are entitled to have.

Meanwhile, our troops in Korea are continuing to do their best to uphold the United Nations.

General Collins, Chief of Staff of the Army, who returned a few days ago from Korea, reported that our military forces there are well organized and well equipped. I am confident that our military forces, together with their comrades in arms from many nations, will continue to give a good account of themselves. They know they are fighting for the freedom and security of their own homes and families.

The danger we face exists not only in Korea. Therefore, the second thing we are going to do is to increase our efforts, with other free nations, to build up defenses against aggression in other parts of the world. In dealing with the Korean crisis, we are not going to ignore the danger of aggression elsewhere.

There is actual warfare in the Far East, but Europe and the rest of the world are also in great danger. The same menace—the menace of Communist aggression—threatens Europe as well as Asia.

To combat this menace, other free nations need our help, and we need theirs. We must work with a sense of real partnership

More Guard Units Ordered Up; Emergency Edict Coming Today

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman warned last night, in the gravest White House speech he has ever made, that American forces "are not adequate" for the great danger that faces "our homes, our Nation, all the things we believe in."

In order "to overcome the danger that threatens our country," he announced a schedule for a large increase in the armed forces, economic stabilization building up to wartime production volume, and the imminent imposition of wage and price controls in a series of industries.

Today, he said, he will proclaim a state of national emergency, which will "call upon every citizen to put aside his personal interests for the good of our country."

The President also announced that he was appointing Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co., to a post similar to that held by "Assistant President" James F. Byrnes in World War II —the Government's top mobilization officer.

Order to Be Issued Today

The Executive Order setting up Wilson's powers and duties will be issued today. He will be in charge of directing all defense production, procurement, manpower, transportation and economic stabilization.

The program in the military manpower field, as President Truman announced it, calls for increasing the size of the armed forces from two and one-half million men at present to three and one-half. This will be done in a few months for the Army and Navy, and in "somewhat longer" time for the Air Force.

Also, the number of men to be called up under the Selective Service system will be increased, and two additional National Guard divisions are being ordered to active service in January.

The Army identified them as the Thirty-first Division from Alabama-Mississippi and the Forty-seventh, from Minnesota-North Dakota. Four National Guard divisions and two regimental combat teams are already in the Federal service, under an order issued last August.

Emphasis on Production

On the military production front, the program Mr. Truman announced pointed to a build-up much larger, in comparison, than that for military manpower.

Production will be raised so there will be weapons not only for men already under arms, but also for the forces of the North Atlantic Nations in Europe, and, in addition, the quantities turned out are to be such that they will

What Mobilization Will Mean to You

Here's what mobilization and a state of emergency will mean to you:

Taxes—Congress will be asked to raise them steeply next year.

Prices—Will be brought under compulsory ceilings "at once" in some industries; voluntary ceilings over other items by setting "fair standards."

Wages—Will be "stabilized" in all industries where price control are set.

Military Service—The draft will be stepped up to bring 3,500,000 men under arms "as soon as possible."

Consumer goods—Sharp cutbacks in many lines are in store next year; the auto and television industries will convert a large part of their capacity to war production.

Work week—May be lengthened beyond 40 hours in defense plants without time-and-a-half for overtime.

Jobs—wil be looking for people; more women, young people and retired workers will be recruited for the labor force.

McCarthy Ascribes Red 'Voice' To Pearson, Who May Sue

Senator Calls Him 'Unprincipled Liar'

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) yesterday told the Senate that columnist Drew Pearson is a "diabolically" clever "voice of international communism."

McCarthy's speech was both prologue and epilogue to the cloakroom tussle he and Pearson had Tuesday night in the exclusive Sulgrave Club here.

The Sulgrave fracas was ushered in with an expression of regret on McCarthy's part that he was to dine with a man whom he was on the verge of discussing in a Senate speech. Things reached the point where Pearson was asking McCarthy about the Senator's income tax case in Wisconsin, and the finale was a sharp cloakroom encounter brought to quick order by Senator Richard Nixon (R., Calif.).

McCarthy gave no further details about his last meeting with Pearson when he spoke to his colleagues.

He did, however, denounce Pearson as:

1. "An unprincipled liar."
2. "A fake."
3. "The owner of a twisted, perverted mentality."
4. "Fiendishly clever."
5. "A prostitute of journalism."

Writer Threatens Action in Court

Columnist Drew Pearson last night threatened to sue Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) for libel.

It wasn't what McCarthy said to the Senate, but what the Senator included in a prepared speech and failed to repeat to the Senate, that Pearson spotted as the possible basis for suit.

Speeches to the Senate are immune from libel suit. Pearson said his lawyer had advised there might be a chink in this immunity that would let him bring suit against McCarthy.

McCarthy also was sharply denounced by David Karr, former Pearson "leg man" who is now vice president of William H. Weintraub, Inc., New York advertising firm, and who had been assailed by the Senator.

In the Senate, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) sprang to Karr's defense, saying that a House appropriations subcommittee of which Anderson was a member investigated charges against Karr and found nothing that would justify McCarthy's allegations.

Pearson did not hear the McCarthy speech. It was covered for Pearson by Jack Anderson, his reporter. Later, through Anderson, Pearson issued a statement saying

Chest Emergency Drive Adds $6782, With $825,410 to Go

Only $6782 more was added to the Community Chest emergency drive yesterday.

That leaves 55,027 people whose needs will not be met next year, unless more Washingtonians come through with hard cash—or the pledge of it—before the Community Chest campaign closes.

The emergency drive which Chest and other volunteers have been pushing this week has brought in a total of $61,590, but the cold fact is that the Chest still needs $825,410 to reach the goal of $4,260,000.

The goal was set to enable the Chest agencies next year to extend a helping hand to 284,000 people, including 34,000 servicemen and their families who, it is expected, will need assistance unless the Korean situation changes.

Some of the people who have added their dollars to push the Community Chest fund up this week have done so by dialing Metropolitan 6262, the emergency drive number. Every communication medium—radio, television, newspaper and special sources—has joined in the last-ditch effort to push the campaign over the top.

Red Feather Christmas Made Easy for You

If you have been missed by Community Chest solicitors—or if you want to increase your Chest pledge—the "emergency drive" gives you the chance to make this a Red Feather Christmas.

Call MEtropolitan 6262 at any time of day or night. A volunteer Community Chest worker will pick up your contribution at your convenience.

25,000 Area Military Workers Granted 8c to 12c Pay Boosts

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Pay raises for upwards of 25,000 per diem employes of the Navy, Army and Air Force in the Washington area were announced yesterday.

The Navy raise will average 11 cents an hour, or 7 percent. It will be effective January 1.

The Army and Air Force boost will average 8 cents an hour and it will be retroactive to November 19. These two services will continue their wage survey of per diem, or blue-collar, workers here and nearby to determine if further adjustments are necessary in view of the larger Navy increase.

Skilled tradesmen will get 12 cents an hour more under the Navy wage plan. Included are machinists, boilermakers, electricians and all skilled trades that require apprentice training to be journeymen.

Navy helpers will get 9 cents an hour while laborers will get a 6 cents-an-hour additional.

The Navy increase is somewhat larger than was expected. The original recommendation called for an average boost of about 8 cents an hour. Employe groups, however, protested and the average was boosted to 11 cents after an appeal.

The law requires the military agencies to fix the salaries of their per diem employes in line with prevailing rates paid by private industry.

All per diems of the military agencies here and nearby will benefit by the increases. Employes in major agencies here cov-and common purpose with these nations. We must stand firm with our allies who have shown their courage and their love of freedom.

The United States, Canada, and the 10 nations of Western Europe who are united with us in the North Atlantic Treaty, have already begun to create combined military defenses. Secretary of State Acheson is flying to Europe on Sunday. He and representatives of these nations will complete the arrangements for setting up a joint army, navy and air force to defend Europe. The defense of Europe is of the utmost importance to the security of the United States.

We will continue to provide assistance to European countries, and to other free countries in other parts of the world, because their defense is also important to our own defense.

The Communist rulers are trying their hardest to split the free nations apart. If they should succeed, they would do staggering damage to the cause of freedom. Unity with our allies is now, and must continue to be, the foundation of our effort.

Working together, the free nations can create military forces strong enough to convince the Communist rulers that they cannot gain by aggression.

Working together, the free nations can present the common front backed by strength, which is necessary if we are to be in a position to negotiate sucessfully with the Kremlin for peaceful ???? ?? ???

Working together, we hope we can prevent another war.

In order to succeed, we in our country have a big job ahead of us.

That is why the third thing we must do to meet the present danger is to step up our own defense program.

We are speeding up the pro- for our own armed forces and for our Allies.

We have a large Navy. We have a powerful Air Force. We have units around which a strong Army can be built. But measured against the danger that confronts us, our forces are not adequate.

On June 25, when the Communists invaded the Republic of Korea, we had less than one and a half million men and women in our Army, Navy, and Air Force. Today, our military strength has reached about two and a half million. Our next step is to increase the number of men and women on active duty to nearly three and a half million.

I have directed the armed forces to accomplish this as soon as possible. The Army and the Navy will be able to do this within a few months. It will take the Air Force somewhat longer. In addition to these men and women on active duty, we have about two million more in the National Guard and the reserves who are subject to call.

As part of the process of achieving a speedier build-up, the number of men to be called under the selective service system has been raised, and two additional National Guard divisions are being ordered to active duty in January.

At the same time, we will have a very rapid speed-up in the production of military equipment. Within one year, we will be turning out planes at five times the present rate of production. Within one year, combat vehicles will be coming off the production line at four times today's rate. Within one year, the rate of production of electronics equipment for defense will have multiplied four and a half times.

These will not be weapons for our armed forces alone. They will constitute an arsenal for the defense of freedom. Out of this arsenal, we will be able to send weapons to other free nations, to add to what they can produce for their own defenses. And in this same arsenal, we will provide a large reserve of weapons to equip additional units in our own armed forces whenever that may be necessary.

Furthermore, while we are working toward these immediate goals in manpower and equipment, we will also expand our training and production facilities so as to make possible a very rapid expansion to full mobilization if that becomes necessary.

We can handle this production program, but it will require hard work.

It will require us to make a lot of changes in our ordinary ways of doing things.

And this brings me to our fourth big job. In order to build the military strength we need, we will have to expand our production greatly. We must also prevent inflation, and stabilize the cost of living.

If we are to make the weapons we need soon enough, we shall have to cut back on many lines of civilian production. But we cannot build up and maintain our armed might, and the industrial strength underlying it, simply by We must produce more — more cutting back civilian production. steel, more copper, more aluminum, more electric power, more cotton, more of many other things.

We must set very high targets, and be willing to make an all-out effort to reach them. Workers will be called upon to work more hours. More women, and more young people and older workers will be needed in our plants and factories. Farmers will have to set higher production goals. Businessmen will have to put all their know-how to work to increase production.

A defense effort of the size we must now undertake will inevitably push prices up, unless we take positive action to hold them down.

We have already taken a number of steps. We have put restrictions on credit buying. We have increased taxes. I hope that the Congress will enact an excess profits tax at this session. Still further taxes will be needed. We cannot escape paying the cost of our military program. The more we pay by taxes now, the better we can hold prices down. I have directed that recommendations be prepared, for early submission to the Congress, to put the increased cost of defense as nearly as possible on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

I have also instructed the director of the budget to reduce the non-military expenditures in the new Federal budget to the minimum required to give effective support to the defense effort.

The measures I have just mentioned — credit control, higher taxes and reduced non-military expenditures—are essential. They are our primary defense against inflation, because they strike at the sources of inflation. But as we move into a greatly increased defense effort, we must also take direct measures to keep prices in line.

The Government is starting at once to impose price controls upon a number of materials and products. These will be mainly items important to defense production and the cost of living.

In those fields where price control is imposed, the Government will also undertake to stabilize wages, as the law requires.

In the immediate future, a series of control orders will be announced by the Economic Stabilization Agency.

In addition, the agency will announce fair standards for prices and wages in those cases where mandatory controls are not imposed. I ask everyone concerned not to set prices and wages higher than these standards will allow. If these standards are violated, it will speed-up the imposition of mandatory controls, including roll-backs where needed The chiselers will not be allowed to get by.

As we move ahead with this mobliziation effort, there will be increased need for central control over the many Government activities in this field. Accordingly, I am establishing an office of defense mobilization. I am appointing Mr. Charles E. Wilson to be director of this office. Mr. Wilson is resigning as president of the General Electric Co. to take this job. In his new position, he will be responsible for directing all the moblization activities of the Government, including production, procurement, manpower, transportation and economic stablization.

The government is also moving forward with preparations for civil defense. I have appointed former Governor Millard Caldwell of Florida to be Federal Civil Defense Administrator.

In addition, I have recommended legislation to the Congress which will authorize the Federal Government to help States and cities in their civil defense preparations. I hope the Congress will enact this legislation soon, so that the civil defense work which has already started can be greatly speeded up.

These are our plans for making our country stronger.

As we go forward, we must keep clearly in mind the meaning of what we are doing.

Our freedom is in danger.

Sometimes we may forget just what freedom means to us. It is as close to us, as important to us, as the air we breathe. Freedom is in our homes, in our schools, in our churches. It is in our work and our Government and the right to vote as we please. Those are the things that would be taken from us if communism should win.

Because our freedom is in danger we are united in its defense. Let our aggressor think we are divided. Our great strength is the loyalty and fellowship of a free people. We pull together when we are in trouble, and we do it by our own choice, not out of fear, but out of love for the great values of our American life, that we all have a share in.

In this great defense effort that we are undertaking, things may not always go as smoothly as we would wish, either in Washington or in your home town. But remember that we are building our defenses in the democratic way, and not by the iron rule of dictatorship.

Those of us who work in the Government will do our best. But the outcome depends, as it has always depended, on the spirit and energy of our people.

The job of building a stronger America must be done on our farms, in our factories, and in our homes. It must be done by every one of us, wherever we are, and whatever our jobs may be.

In this time of danger, each of us must accept an individual responsibility for the good of the country.

Unfortunately, at this moment, a railway union and a large number of its members are out on an unlawful strike that has partially paralyzed our railroad system. This action has already begun to slow down our industry. It is interfering with the movement of troops; it is holding up equipment for our fighting forces; and our civilian population has begun to suffer.

This strike is a danger to the security of our Nation.

As commander-in-chief, therefore, I call upon the union and its striking members to return to work immediately.

I ask you men who are on strike to realize that no matter how serious you believe your grievances are, nothing can excuse the fact that you are adding to your country's danger. I ask you, in the name of our country, to return immediately to your posts of duty.

Our fighting men in Korea have set an example that should inspire us all. Attacked by superior numbers, and in the bitterness of winter weather, they were resolute, steady and determined. Their steadfast courage in the face of reverses is one of the most heroic stories in our country's history.

In the days ahead, each of us should measure his own efforts, his own sacrifices, by the standard of our heroic men in Korea.

Many of you who are young people will serve in the Armed Forces of your country. Nothing you will do later in life will be of greater benefit to your homes, your communities, or your friends.

Many others of you will have to work longer hours in factories or mines or mills. Think of this not as longer hours, but as more planes, more tanks, more ships, more of all the things that are needed for the defense of your homes and your way of life.

All of us will have to pay more takes and do without things we like. Think of this, not as a sacrifice, but as an opportunity, an opportunity to defend the best kind of life that men have ever devised on this earth.

As I speak to you tonight, aggression has won a military advantage in Korea. We should not try to hide or explain away that fact.

By the same token, we should draw renewed courage and faith from the response of the free world to that aggression. What the free nations have done in Korea is right, and men all over the world know that it is right. Whatever temporary setbacks there may be, the right will prevail in the end.

Because of all these things I have been talking about with you, I will issue a proclamation tomorrow morning declaring that a national emergency exists. This will call upon every citizen to put aside his personal interests for the good of the country. All of our energies must be devoted to the tasks ahead of us.

No nation has ever had a greater responsibility that ours has at this moment. We must remember that we are the leaders of the free world. We must understand that we cannot achieve peace by ourselves, but only by cooperating with other free nations and with the men and women who love freedom everywhere.

We must remember that our goal is not war but peace. Throughout the world our name stands for international justice and for a world based on the principles of law and order. We must keep it that way. We are willing to negotiate differences, but we will not yield to aggression. Appeasement of evil is not the road to peace.

The American people have always met danger with courage and determination. I am confident we will do that now, and, with God's help, we shall keep our freedom.

AEC Says U. S. Leads USSR With A-Bombs

By the United Press

Chairman Gordon Dean of the Atotmic Energy Commission heas reassured Congress tha the United States is far ahead of Russia in the atomic bomb race and intends to hold its lead, it was disclosed yesterday.

"We are well ahead of Russia," he told a House Appropriation Subcommittee in testimony presented December 6 and made public yesterday, "as far as bombs are concerned, we are in a strong position."

He appeared before the committee to push President Truman's request for an extra $1,050,000,000 to boost A-bomb capacity and develop a hydrogen bomb if it proves feasible. The committee approved 840 million dollars, and said it will restore the other 210 million dollars if it is needed.

As Dean's testimony was revealed, the AEC confirmed its plans to build a new 5000-acre, 500 million-dollar atomic plant near Paducah, Ky. The factory will make uranium 235, which can be used in both A-bombs and the super H-bomb.

Described by AEC Deputy General Manager Carleton Shugg as "one of the main legs" of the Nation's expanded atomic facilities, the plant will be on the site of the Kentucky Ordnance Works, 16 miles west of Paducah.

It will be operated by the Union Carbide & Carbon Corp., which also runs the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atom installation for the commission.

The House committee explained its cut in the atomic funds by saying that many of the sites for the increased program had not yet been acquired. When they are—and the AEC can show it needs more money—the committee promised to unlock the additional funds.

The Paducah plant will not be affected by the economy move. No date was given for groundbreaking, but a peak force of 10,000 workers will be needed for construction. After that about 1600 persons may be employed there permanently, although no Government town will be built.

Electric power—backbone of all atomic production—will be furnished the new plant by the Tennessee Valley Authority and five privately-owned public utility firms, all will build new steam-generating facilities.

The Paducah plant will be about 500 miles west and a little north of another new plant announced recently for Aiken, S. C.

New Uranium Sources Noted

It will employ what is known as a gaseous diffusion process which separates fissionable (explosive) U-235, used in atomic weapons or fuel elements for nuclear reactors, from non-fissionable U-238.

Uranium ore for the Paducah plant and others will be supplied under an agreement announced late Thursday. It calls for South Africa to supply this country and Britain with atomic materials which are a byproduct of its gold mines.

The new source will be in addition to the Canadian and Belgian Congo supplies already lined up for use by the Western powers.

Dean told the House Committee the new supply gives the United States a uranium ore stockpile which "greatly exceeds anything we could see a year ago."

Power companies which will supply the Paducah plant are Central Illinois Public Service, Illinois Power Co., Kentucky Utilities Co., Middle South Utilities, Inc., and Union Electric Co. of Missouri. They will operate in a syndicate known as Electric Energy, Inc.

On Army Advice

British Asked Korea Buffer, Bevin Says

LONDON, Dec. 15 (AP).—British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin said last night the United States ignored British advice to halt the United Nations drive into North Korea about 100 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Bevin told the House of Commons his government recommended that General MacArthur's forces stop at the narrow waist of the Korean peninsula, leaving a no man's land between the U.N. forces and the Chinese Communists massed on the Manchurian border.

The advice, he explained during a foreign affairs debate, was based on the recommendations of the British Armed Forces Chiefs of Staff.

He said his explanation was made only because "there is a feeling which has been spread about that the government had been asleep and did nothing at all."

Earlier in the debate Conservative Leader Winston Churchill said Prime Minister Attlee should have conferred with President Truman earlier, perhaps after the Inchon landings, and should have recommended establishment of a "broad no man's land."

Asked by Deputy Conservative Leader Anthony Eden "what were the channels between the United Nations and Gen. MacArthur," Bevin replied that the "American Chiefs of Staff are the channel of communication and the final decision is theirs."

He added that "in arriving at their conclusions, the views of other countries and their representatives are all taken into account."

Earlier in the debate, Bevin told the House he doubted "very much whether Russia will take the plunge into war."

"We are living in grim times, but I do not believe they may lead to war," he declared.

Cease-Fire Committee Given MacArthur's Truce Suggestions

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (NYHT).—General MacArthur's "suggestions" on how a Korean truce could be carried out were laid before a three-man United Nations Cease Fire Committee at Flushing Meadow today as the 1950 General Assembly adjourned all but its Far Eastern work.

The U. N. Commander's views on what would be needed for a "satisfactory" cease fire were put forward orally by American Ambassador Ernest A. Gross and Lieut. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, American delegate to the U. N. Military Staff Committee.

They were believed to cover such problems as U. N. supervision of any cease fire, truce lines and protection of the Korean population.

Meet For 2½ Hours

But there was distinct doubt here about any early cease fire with the presently advancing Chinese Communist forces. And the view in some sage Asiatic U. N. quarters was that it would depend on agreement on a possible Far Eastern political conference—which the United States has rejected so far, pending settlement of the Communist aggression in Korea.

The U. N. Committee—comprising Assembly President Nasrollah Entezam of Iran, External Affairs Secretary Lester B. Pearson of Canada, and Sir Benegal Rau of India—met for two and a half hours with Gross and Crittenberger.

Sir Benegal plans to see Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan, Chinese Communist representative here, "unofficially" over the week-end. A copy of the Assembly's resolution setting up the committee to determine a cease-fire basis, is being forwarded to General Wu by Entezam.

Pearson indicated the committee might confer with other U. N. nations with fighting forces in Korea. At the moment there is no plan for discussions with the North Korean Communist regime.

Political Committee Called

Meantime, the Assembly Political Committee was called to meet at Lake Success at 10:45 a. m. Monday, after Soviet Delegate Jacob A. Malik had complained in the closing minutes of today's plenary session, that the committee had not yet finished debate on "important questions." He listed the Soviet-sponsored Chinese Communist complaints of American "aggression" against Formosa, and American bombings of China.

Actually, the interrupted business before the committee had been a resolution by the United States and five other countries to call for a Chinese Communist troop withdrawal in Korea, along with a Soviet proposal for withdrawal of all "foreign" troops from Korea.

The committee also has before it a 12-nation Asiatic and Arab proposal for a conference on Far Eastern political problems, which was estimated to have some 25 votes behind it—but not enough for the two thirds required in the Assembly.

Senator Borah's Sister Fatally Burned in Home

FAIRFIELD, Ill., Dec. 15 (U.P.).—Mrs. Mattie Rinard, 86, sister of the late Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, burned to death in her home today.

Authorities said the elderly woman's clothing apparently caught fire while she was cooking and she jumped into bed in an effort to extinguish the flames. The bedclothing also caught fire.

Reds Put German 'Peace' Law In Effect, Accuse Publisher

BERLIN (Saturday), Dec. 16 (AP).—A law intended to frighten all Germans into the Soviet "peace offensive" camp through penalties up to death for support of Western defense policies went into effect in West Germany on the stroke of midnight.

Persons found by Communist definition to be warmongering agents of the West were made legally subject to beheading.

The law pretends to apply to the 48 million Germans in the West and the 2 millions in Allied-occupied West Berlin as well as the East's subjugated 18 millions.

Regardless of where he lives in divided Germany, anyone considered a supporter of Western military policies and opponents of the Russian "peace offensive" is held guilty of warmongering.

Long prison terms are promised for violators aside from "agents."

The law hits at any policeman who stops Communists rowders in their "peace campaign" agitation, any editor who publishes anti-Soviet material, any German official dealing with West German defense preparations.

Those who travel the 100 miles between West Berlin and West Germany through the Soviet Zone now are liable to seizure and drumhead trial.

The Communists acted quickly to name names.

The Berliner Zeitung am Abend, a semi-official East Berlin newspaper, singled out Erik Reger, publisher-editor of Der Tagesspiegel in West Berlin, as the No. 1 candidate for prosecution.

The basis for the charge was a column by Constantine Brown, a Washington Star writer, published Friday morning.

Brown said some experts believe the Russian armies need not be feared as long as the atomic bomb can be used against troop concentrations. He added that the time to put this theory into practice (in Korea) has arrived.

Nation Threatened, Truman Declares

"provide a large reserve of weapons to equip additional units in our own armed forces whenever that may be necessary."

Even further, production capacity and training facilities will be expanded—possibly in a manner proposed by the British with their "shadow" factories before the last war—"so as to make possible a very rapid expansion to full mobilization if that becomes necessary."

On homefront activities, the Chief Executive forecast longer hours of labor, more women and younger people in the labor force, higher production goals for farmers and more taxes for everyone.

He implied the defense program cannot be entirely paid for by taxes but will be put, rather, on a pay-as-you-go basis "as nearly as possible."

The Nation-wide broadcast clarified finally a matter of great speculation in recent weeks—whether wage-price controls would be begun on a general, over-all, basis or only selectively. It is to be the latter, the President said.

"The Government is starting at once to impose price controls upon a number of materials and products," he declared. "These will be mainly items important to defense production and the cost of living.

"In those fields where price control is imposed, the Government will also undertake to stabilize wages, as the law requires."

From a high source in the Economic Stabilization Agency, it was learned last night that the prices of autos, oil and some other products will be the first to be set, by orders to be issued probably over this weekend.

The President said the ESA will also announce "fair standards" for prices and wages in those areas where mandatory controls are not yet imposed. It was believed that as soon as ESA obtains the necessary large administrative staff able to cope with the problem, it will impose price and wage ceilings, over-all, and at the levels announced in the meantime as the "fair standards."

More blunt than he has ever been, the Chief Eecutive declared last night that the "grave danger" facing the Nation "has been created by the rulers of the Soviet Union."

The forces of Communist imperialism, he said, "are now willing to push the world to the brink of a general war to get what they want." They have attacked peace efforts by "threats and treachery and violence."

Twice the President declared that these forces would not be met by appeasement. The principles of the United Nations, he said, will be defended, if necessary, by force of arms.

The foundation of the American defense effort, Mr. Truman insisted, is "unity with our allies" in the North Atlantic Pact. He said that "working together" with them, "we hope that we can prevent another world war." The implication in that was that we cannot prevent such a war if we do not work together.

If Russia should succeed in splitting the nations of the free world apart, he warned, the Russians would thereby inflict "staggering damage" to the cause of freedom.

The theme of the radio address, even the basic word—used a dozen times in a relatively short speech—was "danger." The President noted that "aggression has won a military victory in Korea" and that there should be no attempt to hide it or explain it away.

Reds Smash At Beachhead

hold in northeast Korea for the Tenth Corps, which had been forced to retreat before overwhelming numbers of Chinese.

As the beachhead shrank, the Americans blasted bridges and burned supplies to keep them out of enemy hands. The skies glowed Friday night with the light of demolitions.

The troops in the beachhead were pulling back to new positions set up in depth around the port of Hungnam, six miles south of Hamhung.

The United States First Marine and Third and Seventh Infantry Divisions, with elements of two South Korean divisions, and a few British commandos, retreated into the beachhead last weekend.

Meanwhile a threat mounted on the long-quiet western front.

Field dispatches reported steady massing of Chinese Communists in the center of Korea north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

General MacArthur said in a war summary this mass was moving southward and eastward.

Eighth Army headquarters cut off any further disclosures of what it knows of Red movements.

"Volunteers" Exhorted

In his war summary, General MacArthur quoted a Peiping broadcast which he said demolished "the fiction" that Chinese in Korea were merely "volunteers."

MacArthur quoted a broadcast message by the Chinese Gen. Lin Piao to the Chinese Red Fourth Field Army which he commands, exhorting it "to annihilate the invading troops of the imperialists."

MacArthur commented: "This is the normal language of an army commander addressing his troops."

MacArthur's summary said also the "bottomless well of Chinese Communist manpower in Manchuria continues to flow into Korea."

For example, it identified fresh troops attacking in the northheast as members of the Chinese Red Third Field Army commanded by Gen. Chen Yi.

One On the Aisle

Any Amateur Can Get in This Act

By Richard L. Coe

"IT MUST LOOK good in Pravda."

"Which do you mean? Korea? The railroad strike? Mr. Dewey?"

"No. They don't really understand all that. I mean our system."

"Which one?"

"Charities."

"Well, after all, charity begins at home. Its none of their business. Anyway, we've got lots of charities."

"What's just it. It's all done on a private basis."

"Well, you certainly don't want the Government to take it over. Like they do in those other countries?"

"But that's the reason. The governments took over those jobs because the private systems couldn't do it. Nobody cared enough."

"Why, we do here. Didja see in the paper where in the District of Columbia alone we've raised nearly three and a half million just for local charities alone? And that doesn't count all the other drives for one thing and another during the rest of the year. Pretty good, I think."

"That's all very well, but the point is we're still nearly a million behind what we should be and the national income is bigger this year than it was last. And have you noticed that in the past week in a drive for nearly $900,000, only $55,000 has been raised? And that with all the newspapers, radio stations and public figures pushing the thing."

"That's not so good, is it?"

"Well, as I say, it must look good in Pravda. I can imagine the little item around page eight: 'People Starving in U. S. Rich Refuse to Give.'"

"That's not true and you know it."

"Course not. But it can be made to look true."

"Say, I thought this was supposed to be a theater column."

"It is."

"Well, why are you dragging all this up?"

"Because if you've got time to read this, you've got time to give a buck to the Community Chest and every buck counts, even if it's in pennies. And because no one is immune. We're all responsible."

"But I gave my donation."

"So had John Marcon of the Metropolitan Theater, but when he read I was going to plug for donations on the telephone switchboard this morning he figured he'd be busy so he sent another donation to me in the mail."

"Gosh, can you handle a telephone switchboard?"

"No, but Walter Haight said yesterday there were lots of pretty girls around to show you how. You push in a plug, someone tells you they want to give to the Chest and you take their name and address so a volunteer worker can go out to their home and pick up the money. Then they hang up."

"When are you gonna do all this?"

"This morning from 10 till 1 at MEtropolitan 6262."

"Well, I'll be seein' ya."

"Yeah. Gimme a ring, huh?"

"Yeah."

CHRISTMAS programs, largely for children, figure strongly on today's special events calendar.

The Trans-Lux will be open early for Jim Gibbons to start his Town Clock, WMAL, show at 8:30. Your ticket of admission is a contribution of one or more cans of food; Jim will interview his audience, talk about his Country Store and you'll get a showing of Orson Welles' "Macbeth."

The Metropolitan programs a special performance for Children starting at 10 o'clock, with Gene Klavan, Santa Claus and Porky Pig in person; on the screen, there'll be cartoon comedies, live ones with Laurel and Hardy and the Three Stooges and "Thundering Rails," a short about the in-the-news railroads. Gifts for lucky youngsters including six Lionel electric train sets, four Hopalong outfits, a hundred Klavan ocarinas and a wrist watch for a boy or a girl and ice cream for all. Yes, you can park the kids there for two hours.

Two Alexandria Performances

The Georgetown will open at 10 for a special showing of Shirley Temple in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" under the auspices of the Buckingham Nursery and Kindergarten of Arlington.

The Children's Theater of Northern Virginia will give two performances, at 10:30 this morning and a 2:30 matinee of "The First Christmas" at Alexandria's George Washington High School. Also on the bill will be Martinez' circus dogs, Harry Baker's TV magic and singing by the glee club of Catholic University and the choir of All-Souls' Episcopal Church.

The Hiser-Bethesda will have three showings of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," with Reginald Owen, Terry Kilburn and Gene Lockhart, at 11, 1 and 3 o'clock. Walt Disney cartoons also are on the bill.

ARENA STAGE announces that since all matinees for "Alice in Wonderland" are sold out, it is turning its Monday afternoon dress rehearsal into a public rehearsal. It will start at 1:30.

THORNTON WILDER wired the G. W. Players a change for the third act dialogue of "The Skin of Our eeth." The line is recited by Mr. Antrobus, who, in telling of three excellent things that must be fought for, used to say: "a field, a home or a country." The author has changed it to read: "whehter it's a field, or a house or an idea." The players close their run tonight at Lisner's Auditorium.

THE PLAZA authorities evidently don't read this column; the other day I noted that a typographical error in reference to the Beaumarchais comedy, "The Marriage of Figaro," came up with Louis XIV instead of Louis XVI. . . . The error was repeated in an ad, our erudite readers have been calling me about my ignorance and I am feeling downright bitter, bitter, bitter, so, since this is a German movie, Plaza, will you, bitte, change it?

EGYPT AT MARYLAND: Joan Kendall and Douglass Williams have the title roles in Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," which tonight winds up its run for the University of Maryland campus theater at College Park. Rudolph Pugliese directed and Ray Ehrensberger produced this comedy for the University's speech and drama department

GOP Vote Acheson Firing

publican attack on Acheson in the last campaign. For the past week a Senate GOP Policy Subcommittee had been struggling with several drafts of a resolution originally presented by Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) Each meeting broke up in disagreemen over the subject matter and timing.

Yesterday Representative Martin and the House GOP Policy Committee took the initiative. In a short-notice party conference, Martin's resolution, with only one amendment, was quickly adopted.

The Senate GOP caucus followed at 4:30 p. m. When the Senators appeared on the verge of another disagreement, Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) proposed the language just approved by House Republicans. This was finally adopted, with a single paragraph addition by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

The House GOP resolution read as follows:

"In this critical hour, confidence of the American people in their leadership is essential to our security.

"It is completely obvious that Secretary Acheson and the State Department under his leadership have lost the confidence of the Congress and the American people and cannot regain it.

"Recognizing this fact, we earnestly insist for the good of our country that Mr. Acheson be replaced as Secretary of State, that there be a thorough housecleaning in the State Department, and changes in personnel and policies responsible for this lack of confidence."

The first three paragraphs of the Senate GOP resolution are identical. The Senate group added this additional paragraph by Taft:

"We pledge our fullest cooperation with the President and the Administration in a united effort to meet by the most effective means the present national crisis. For this effort there must be national cooperation in substance as well as in form, in fact as well as name."

Five Republican Senators voted against the resolution. They were: Aiken (Vt.), Morse (Oreg.), Langer (N. D.), H. Alexander Smith (N. J.) and Margaret Chase Smith (Me.).

The 23 voting for it were Brewster (Me.), Butler (Nebr.), Capehart (Ind.), Carlson (Kans.), Donnell (Mo.), Dworshak (Idaho), Ecton (Mont.), Hendrickson (N. J.), Hickenlooper (Iowa), Ives (N. Y.), Jenner (Ind.), Kem (Mo.), Knowland (Calif.), McCarthy (Wis.), Millikin (Colo.), Mundt (S. Dak.), Nixon (Calif.), Saltonstall (Mass.), Taft (Ohio), Thye (Minn.), Watkins (Utah), Wherry (Nebr.), and Young (N. Dak.).

Senator Millikin, chairman of the conference, said most of those opposing the resolution objected to "pinpointing" an attack on Acheson at this time. But he said there was no "defense" of Acheson at the conference.

Millikin added that note was taken of the fact that Acheson was leaving Sunday for Atlantic Pact conferences in Brussels. He said Republicans felt it would be "too late" for them to act when Acheson returned.

"We thought it should be done before or after the Brussels conference, not while he was over there," he said. "We decided to do it before."

Even before the Senate Republicans acted Democratic leaders hit the House GOP move.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) called it "an invitation to Stalin to strike anywhere." Lucas said the Kremlin might well conclude that this country is divided and act accordingly.

DAY DREAMS
can become true!

We all have them and their subjects are legend . . . Some about trips to far places, some about the more mundane affairs of everyday life. But whatever the reverie it can only come true if you can pay the cost.

A sure way to make day dreams come true is to open a savings account with Burke and Herbert.

Senate Group Agrees on Liberalized Profits Tax for Utilities

By Samuel W. Bell
NYHT News Service

The Senate Finance Committee agreed yesterday on a formula for treatment of the earnings of public utilities and transportation systems far more liberal than the provisions covering such regulated industries in the House-approved three-billion-dollar excess profits tax bill.

The Senators also decided to permit "growth" industries, if they wished to take their average earnings "in one-half of 1949 and 40 percent of earnings in 1950" as their earnings credit for computing excess profits. The ordinary formula calls for a base of the average earnings in the best three years of the 1946-1949 period.

In addition to those substantial changes, which may result in a reduction in tax revenue, the committee approved several technical changes, but failed to complete action on the measure or even approach a decision on the bill's major features.

Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said the committee would meet Saturday, again expressing hope that excess profits tax legislation will be submitted to the Senate next year.

The House bill provides for an excess profits tax of 75 percent on 85 percent of the average earnings of the best three years of the 1946-49 period, with a ceiling of 67 percent on the total corporation tax.

The important decisions on the 75-percent rate of the 85-percent base and the 67-percent total tax limitation remain to be made, or at least announced, by the Finance Committee.

Among other things announced was the agreement that taxpayers using the alternative invested-capital base for computing excess profits may use 12 percent, 10 percent and 8 percent as in the excess profits tax act of World War II, instead of the invested-capital formula of the House bill.

For regulated industries the action of the committee was summarized by the congressional tax experts as follows:

Regulated airlines and telephone companies have been allowed an alternative credit of 7 percent of total assets. The House bill is 6 percent.

Telegraph services, electric power, gas, water, transportation of oil or gas by pipeline, transportation of an intra-State or local interurban railroad or trolley system or bus system, railroads regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission and trucking and buses subject to regulation would receive an alternative credit of 6 percent on their total assets. The House bill is 5 percent.

The new alternative credit for utilities would be available to companies deriving 80 percent or more of their income from regulated utility business.

Churches Schedule Christmastide Music

Scores of area churches will continue providing the musical setting for the story of the birth of Christ next week.

Among those taking part Sunday in observance of this pre-Christmas tradition will be found:

St. Albans Episcopal Church, Massachusetts and Wisconsin aves. nw., where "The Coming of the Christ" will be sung at 3 and 7 p. m. by the Saint Cecilia Choir, the Junior Choir and the Junior High Young People's Fellowship. More than 1000 persons attended the Christmas pageant last year.

Christ Episcopal Church Alexandria A Christmas carol service after a traditional pattern given at Winchester Cathedral, England, will be presented at 4 p. m. by the combined choirs.

National Presybyterian Church, 1764 N st. nw. The annual candlelight carol service will be held at 5 p. m. in the church. Hymns from many lands will be sung under the direction of Theodore Schaefer.

Army Medical Center Memorial Chapel, Walter Reed Hospital. The Walter Reed Memorial Protestant Choir will present the cantata, "When the Christ Child Came," as part of a 5 p. m. candlelight service.

The YWCA's yearly vesper service will take place in the living room of the 17th and K st. nw. building at 5:30 p. m., followed by carols around the Christmas tree and a wassail bowl.

Trinity Lutheran Church, 4th and E sts. nw. The choir, under the direction of C. Howard Channing will present choral vespers at 6 p. m.

Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., The Mystery of the Nativity" will be presented in song and pantomine by the Youth Choirs and the Department of Children's Drama, at 6:45 p. m.

Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw. A carol vesper service featuring the three children's choirs, under the direction of Mrs. Ruth F. Carow, is set for 7 p. m.

Berean Baptist Church, 2033 11th st. nw. The story of the Nativity will be presented in pantomine with musical background at 7 p. m. under the direction of Mrs. Naomi Wright.

Eldbrooke Methodist Church, 4100 River rd. nw. The Junior Choir will give a story of "The Other Wise Man," at the 7:30 p. m. family Christmas worship service.

Hamline Methodist Church, 4501 16th st. nw. Four church choirs—from youngsters of 4 to adults—will present at 7:45 p. m. a candlelight, carol and cantata service.

John Wesley AME Zion Church, 14th and Corcoran sts., nw. A festival of Christmas music will be sung at 8 p. m. by the Cathedral, Children's Youth and Chorus choirs under the direction of Prof. A. H. Johnson.

Francis Asbury Methodist Church, 3146 16th st. nw. Haydn Morgan's cantata, "The Holy Birth" will be presented by the choir at the 8 p. m. service.

Petworth Methodist, 32 Grant cir. nw. The annual Christmas service will be given by the three choirs at 8 p. m.

'Spread of Faith'

St. Thomas' Plans Candle Ceremony

A dramatic portrayal of the spreading of the Christian faith will be carried out Sunday night at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, 1772 Church st. nw.

Worshipers, as they leave the 8 p. m. service, will each hold a candle ignited from a large taper representing Christ on the altar.

The service will follow the pattern of one used in King's College Chapel, Cambridge, England, consisting of a series of lessons and carols.

OTHER HOLIDAY EVENTS: The Washington Ethical Society will sponsor a "Cut-Your-Own-Christmas-Tree" at 2 p. m. today at the evergreen grove of Dr. and Mrs. George Speck, 918 Beverly dr., Alexandria. Cutting tools will be provided and each tree, regardless of size, costs $2, which will go to the society's seventy-fifth anniversary fund . . . The Rev. J. Warren Hastings will give his annual dramatic reading of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" Thursday at 6:15 p. m. in the National City Christian Church social hall

Rededication Set at Keller For Sunday

Service of rededication for the refurbished Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, 907 Maryland ave. ne., will be held Sunday at 11 a. m.

The Rev. Carl R. Simon, pastor, will read the order of rededication, and the service will be led by the Rev. Kenneth Senft, assistant pastor. The Rev. J. Frank Fife, president of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Maryland, will preach the sermon.

Nearly $25,000 has been spent in painting and decorating the church and Sunday school.

Candlelight Program

The annual Christmas candlelight program of the Cheverly Christian Church in Cheverly, Md., will be held Christmas Eve at 11 p. m. A special program of Christmas music will be offered

More Pastors Urge Support of Chest

Scores of area religion leaders have united in urging support for the final Community Chest Campaign effort now in progress.

Among the latest to speak out are:

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, who said:

"One of the best traditions of American life is 'neighborliness.' When a barn burns down, or a flood comes, or sickness, the neighbors turn out and help.

"We live in too big a community to know all our neighbors. But the Community Chest gives us all a chance to be neighborly. Surely no one wants to put himself down as un-neighborly."

The Right Rev. Msgr. John J. Cartwright rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral, who said:

"The need for the success of the Community Chest drive should be evident to all. The need of Washington for the work of the Community Chest should be still more evident

"Doctors, clergymen, social workers, nurses—all who are directly and widely connected with the social problems of this community—are quite convinced of this need. We hope that all the citizens of Washington will catch the same conviction and act upon it."

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of Adas Israel Congregation, who said:

"Our great community is frantically striving to raise its minimum fund requirements. Let us remember that we are merely God's stewards of the worldly goods in our possession to use and distribute according to His holy and righteous will."

The Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church and president of the American Baptist Convention, who said:

"At a time when America is doing so much for needy humanity in many areas abroad, it is unthinkable that we should neglect to provide adequate care for those in need within our own community.

"This Christmas season seems to be a particularly appropriate time for giving generously to others since we are observing the birth of Him who went about doing good."

The Rev. Stephen Gill Spottswood, minister of John Wesley AME Zion Church, who said:

"The Community Chest is the fruit of Christian democracy. Every wage earner should contribute to the basic, over-all services provided by Community Chest organizations.

"People in low-wage brackets should contribute and up to the highest paid individuals, in proportion to their incomes. If we have not paid all past pledges we should do so now.

"The Community Chest must be filled—it should be oversubscribed."

NATIVITY SCENE—The work of Hazel Scaife Detwiler will be blessed Christmas Eve at Ascension and St. Agnes' Episcopal Church. The figures to be blessed at the church, 1215 Massachusetts ave. nw., include the Infant Jesus, Our Lady, St. Joseph and the ox and the ass. Others will be added from the studio of the artist at 631 G st. se.

Academy Dedication Set

The first building of the Hebrew Academy of Washington will be dedicated on March 25, Solomon H. Feldman, cochairman of the general planning committee, has announced.

A community-wide campaign to raise $250,000 to complete the building began earlier this week. The $500,000 building is under construction at 16th st. and Fort Stevens dr. nw. It will contain 16 classrooms and an auditorium seating 600.

The 7-year-old school, now housed in the Curtis School, 3235 O st. nw., has 275 students. Facilities for 500 in the elementary and junior high levels will be provided in the new building, Joseph M. Viener, cochairman, revealed.

Cathedral Set For Holiday Observances

Washington Cathedral's pre-Christmas program moves into high gear next week.

At the 4 p. m. evensong service Sunday, the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin will preach. Dr. Coffin was formerly president of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and one-time moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, United States of America.

Other activities during the week will feature the children from the three cathedral schools and the surrounding communities. Six hundred boys and girls from St. Albans School and the National Cathedral School will join in traditional carols and the reading of the Christmas lesson in the cathedral Monday at 3 p. m.

At 4:30 p. m., neighborhood children will be guests at the Children's Chapel where a service will be held.

A fourteenth century miracle play, with a cast from the National Cathedral School for Girls, presented first at the school at 9:30 a. m., will be repeated in a telecast Tuesday at 3 p. m. from station WMAL-TV.

Nearly a 1000 children from the Chevy Chase elementary schools will hold their annual carol service in the cathedral Tuesday at 10 a. m.

Ministerial Union To Broadcast Twice

The Arlington Church of the Air, sponsored by the Arlington Ministerial Union, will present two broadcasts Sunday: 11 a. m. on WARL, the Rev. Harry W. Backhus of Arlington Methodist Church; 11:30 p. m. on WEAM, the Rev. Paul R. Hunter of Rock Spring Congregational Church.

In another broadcast, the Rev. Robert F. McFarlane, director of the National Baptist Hour, will preach on "Man's Most Common Sin" at 7:30 a. m. over WWDC.

Organ to Be Dedicated

A new organ will be dedicated Sunday at 11 a. m. in the Knox Orthodox Presbyterian Church, Granville dr. and Sutherland rd., the Rev. Glenn R. Coie, pastor, announced. Mr. Coie will preach

Grace Church To Install New Rector

The Rev. Herbert W. Lamb, jr., will be installed as rector of Grace Episcopal Church, 9301 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Sunday at 8 p. m.

Mr. Lamb

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will conduct the services and preach.

A reception will follow.

Mr. Lamb succeeds the Rev. Francis M. Hamilton, who resigned in July to become rector of Immanuel Church, New Castle, Del.

For eight years, the 42-year-old minister was rector of St. Paul's Church, Waterloo, N. Y. Before that, he served six years as rector of Christ Church, Sherburne, N. Y.

Minister Will Enter Priesthood

The Rev. Arthur H. Underwood, assistant minister of Christ Episcopal Church, will be ordained to the priesthood at 11 a. m. today at the church, 3100 O st. nw.

The Right Rev. J. Gillespie Armstrong, D. D., Suffragan Bishop of Pennsylvania and a former rector of Christ Church, will perform the ceremony. The preacher will be the Rev. Dr. Arthur T. Mollegan, professor at Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria.

Mr. Underwood will be presented for ordination by the rector of Christ Church, the Rev. John R. Anschutz.

A reception in the parish house will follow the service.

A graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy, Yale University and Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn., Mr. Underwood was ordained deacon last June and has been assistant minister at Christ Church since July 1. He is director of the church school. He will remain as assistant rector at Christ Church.

Camouflaged Strikes

The new technique of halting work vital to the national interests while pretending not to strike will have to be dealt with by some means or other. In the case of the current railroad strike, the Government is asked to close its eyes to realities and suppose that all the railroad yard workers in Birmingham, Chicago, St. Louis and Washington got sick simultaneously. Last spring a similar fiction succeeded in thwarting the Government's efforts to break up an illegal strike of the United Mine Workers. In that case Judge Keech found the union not to be in contempt because John L. Lewis had told them to go back to work, although he continued to take advantage of the strike in negotiating with the operators. We pointed out at the time that if the courts are to disregard the overwhelming fact of concerted action on the part of union members and heed only the lip-service that union leaders may give to court orders, protection of the national health and the national interest by means of injunction will be impossible.

Unfortunately, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia is still pondering upon the issues raised by the UMW case. It is one of only two cases argued at the last term of the court that have not yet been decided. Undoubtedly the court realizes how important an early decision is, and it may be expected to act as soon as all the difficult points can be resolved and an opinion or opinions can be written. Of course, its decision will be based solely on the merits of the case before it, and no one who believes in an independent judicial system would have it otherwise. It is an unavoidable fact, however, that if the court sustains Judge Keech's ruling the question of what to do about disguised, illegal strikes that imperil the national safety and health will have to go to Congress. In that event, Congress will have to face the problem of devising other penalties for groups that join in concerted work stoppages that imperil the national security. It is simply intolerable to have key industrial groups throwing our economy out of gear in a crisis whether they are in the management or working category. The first principle of a government is to govern.

Sardar Patel

One of the indoor pastimes of India till yesterday was speculation upon what might happen to India when one or other of its two strong men, Premier Nehru and Deputy Premier Patel, passed away. Another was speculation as to who would be missed more. Well, Patel is now dead, and, instantly, a cloud has appeared over internal India, at a time of grave international anxiety, which Indians and the friendly world will view with the greatest misgiving. Patel and Nehru were Gandhi's favorite disciples, but no two men could be more different, and Gandhi knew it. Gandhi in his wisdom felt that two such disparates would be complementary, and so they have proved, though the personal relation has never been comfortable. The idealist Nehru shut his eyes to some of the harsher tactics of Patel, and Patel bore with relative composure the poetic flights and peace-loving gestures of Nehru. But both knew that the fate of India depended upon the maintenance of a unity of ultimate purpose between them.

Vallabhbhai Patel, a lawyer by profession, was the master mind and organizer of the party in power, the Congress Party, which won independence for India. He had no Indian nuances in his composition. He was the Indian James A. Farley in his gift for political organization, but he held the party together by a leadership and an authority which made him far more than a mere political boss. His honorific was "Sardar," meaning chieftain, but he had the caliber, too, of a statesman. He it was who almost at a stroke brought the princely states into the Indian union. The states had an individual and separate relation to the British crown, and the Indian government inherited the relation. Patel simply rearranged their principalities and disposed of their territorial holdings as if they were a deck of cards. Exactly how he did it is still a mystery. In part, doubtless, he owed his success, as this newspaper said in an article on him early this year, to a steady diet of Machiavelli.

Some of his enemies said he had all the makings of a Hindu Fascist. Certainly he had leanings toward the extreme Hinduists in his party who would like to settle the Indo-Pakistan quarrel by arms, but he operated back of a mask, and all his affiliations were more or less covert. At any rate, an iron hand has suddenly been removed in India, and the hope will go out to India that there is enough resiliency in the Congress Party to absorb it. The effect upon Nehru himself will be interesting to watch. As we noted recently, the Nepal affair showed the beginnings of a realistic strain in the Prime Minister, and the loss of his political twin may induce him to be even more realistic as time goes on.

Cease-Fire

No one can mistake the purpose behind the efforts of the United Nations General Assembly to arrange a cease-fire in Korea. The cease-fire resolution adopted by 52 votes, with only Soviet Russia and her satellites against it, put the Assembly on record as being anxious to prevent the spread of the Korean war. That is a worthy aim and one of the utmost importance. But the way in which the cease-fire committee appears to be going about its work seems to us to compromise the laudable stand that the U.N. has heretofore taken in regard to the aggressive war in Korea.

Yesterday the cease-fire committee headed by Assembly President Entezam of Iran held its first meeting with representatives of the United States. Later it will meet with the spokesmen for Communist China to discuss the conditions on which a truce can be based. This distorts the whole picture of the United Nations' relation to what is happening in Korea. Obviously there is need to sound out the Peking government. The intervention of the Chinese Communists in Korea has brought an entirely new problem before the Assembly. It has an obligation to find out, if possible, what the Chinese intentions are, and, recognizing the Chinese interest in the future of Korea, to determine what guarantees affecting a Korean settlement would be necessary to halt the invasion. Nothing will be lost and something may be gained by exploring this problem with the Chinese before considering the question of the new aggression in Korea.

But what has this to do with the United States? To be sure, this country has the most vital interest in the outcome. If the war continues in Korea, Americans will suffer more than any others. The elementary fact is, however, that American troops are in Korea as part of a United Nations force. There is no question about them obeying the orders of the U.N. If they are ordered to withdraw, of course, they will do so. If they are ordered to continue resisting the Chinese invaders, they will, as President Truman said last night, continue "to do their best to uphold the United Nations." We fail to see, therefore, that the cease-fire committee can have anything to say to the United States.

It is true that some suggestions have been made that the Assembly try to buy off the invaders. Soviet Delegate Malik says that the Chinese "volunteers" would go home if all the foreign troops, meaning the United Nations forces, would evacuate Korea. There are other hints that the Chinese might agree to a cease-fire if the United States would negotiate on all Far Eastern problems—meaning chiefly Formosa. But the U.N. could not sponsor deals of this sort under the pressure of a military invasion without destroying itself. The world peace organization has assumed an obligation to give the Korean people an independent, unified and democratic government. If negotiations are possible, as the President said, they should be directed toward this end. It would be unfortunate to have this aim frustrated by aggressive armed forces, but it would be catastrophic for the U. N. to knuckle down to a shabby deal in an effort to appease the unappeasable.

Mediation On Haya

Considerable alarm has arisen in parts of Latin America lest Peru break diplomatic relations with Colombia over the case of Victor Raul Haya de la Torre. Haya is the Peruvian political leader, outlawed by the government, who has been a refugee in the Colombian Embassy in Lima since early in 1949. The tragedy of a diplomatic break lies in the ugliness that it would provoke. Moreover, it would disrupt hemisphere unity at a time of international peril when unity ought to be a paramount consideration.

Much of the present trouble stems from the confusing decision of the International Court of Justice a few weeks ago asserting that Haya is a political refugee rather than a common criminal as charged by Peru, but that Colombia did not have the right alone to determine his status and that Peru is not bound to give him safe conduct. This, of course, was like saying that although a prisoner was not guilty the court would do nothing to stop the hanging. Understandably, Colombia viewed the decision as inconclusive and declined on principle to surrender Haya.

Colombia now has proposed in a note to Peru that the issue be resubmitted to the International Court for clarification. Meanwhile, however, Haya has become a stalking horse in Peruvian politics. The so-called oligarchia and military elements which support the government have been pressing President Odria to step in and seize Haya for trial by a naval court. Odria reportedly has been more or less inclined to go along with resubmission, but with the nullifying qualification that Peru will not agree to a reversal! At the same time the United States, in a memorandum to Peru, has cited the need for unity in offering this country's good offices.

Even if the court should rehear or clarify the case, it is questionable whether a new decision would be more satisfactory. Peru is not a signatory to the 1933 Montevideo Convention which gives the country where political refuge is sought the right to determine the status of the refugee. Thus the court would be faced with the same dilemma again—that although the right of asylum is a point of high principle in Latin America, Peru is not a party to the pertinent convention. Yet even though Colombia agreed to be bound by the new decision, a verdict against Haya would not be morally right.

The snarl seems hopeless unless the Organization of American States intervenes or the parties accept the good offices of the United States. The latter possibility ought to be explored vigorously; a man of the good standing in the Americas of Sumner Welles, for example, might well be called upon as mediator. The advantage to Peru in accepting such mediation is that it would be able to save face in a magnanimous gesture toward unity that would be applauded by humanitarians throughout the hemisphere.

Weapons First

Governor Dewey has been making good sense in his attempts to impress upon the country the urgency of mobilization. However, his call for an Army of 100 divisions and the immediate calling up of 25 National Guard divisions must be judged, not by the importance of increasing our military strength, but by the necessity for doing this in orderly fashion. Universal service must come, and before it can be put fully into effect a lot more older men probably will have to be drafted. But first we need planes and guns for trained men to use—not merely crowds of recruits wondering what to do.

General Collins gave what is probably the best answer as to why the immediate mobilization of the remaining National Guard divisions is impractical. "Actually," he said, "we are drafting today at about as fast a rate as we can receive, equip, accommodate and have adequate cadres to train the draftees coming in." Secretary Marshall gave a further explanation of the kind of mobilization the military wants: "Excessive speed is to be avoided when there is not enough of a base to do it correctly. . . . The important factor is to do this thing in such a way that it provides a base for a very quick further expansion if we are faced with world war."

Certainly the armed forces themselves need to be prodded, but in the last analysis their own facilities must set the pace. It would be of no help to have men suddenly dumped on the military services with no place to house them and no weapons to equip them—conditions reminiscent of the "tin soldiers" of 1940-41. Industrial mobilization—the heart of any preparedness effort—is the item of first priority, along with methods to control inflation. Concurrently, as the armed forces expand, universal service and a revamping of the reserve program can provide a reservoir of readily available trained men. But the goal is results, not chaos, and this must be kept in mind especially if the mobilization must be sustained over any long period. The urge to "do it yesterday" is commendable, but it needs to be restrained lest it bring more confusion than strength.

More Production

Increased production is often said to be the best preventive of inflation. That is not strictly true, because increased production does not insure price stability if the supply of money in consumer hands is increasing more rapidly than the supply of goods. To correct this kind of pervasive price inflation, monetary and credit controls, and heavy taxes are required to reduce the amount of consumer purchasing power. Increases in prices of specific commodities caused by the inadequacy of production facilities call for a different kind of remedy—expansion of outlays for new plant and equipment.

No matter what steps are taken to curb inflation, the country is confronted by scarcities of many kinds of goods that are desperately needed. Some of them are imported raw materials that we cannot produce for ourselves. But, in most cases, American industries are able and ready to increase output in response to demand. The necessity of expansion is evidenced by the slight drop in industrial production in November following a slowdown in the rate of expansion that suggests that the country on its present work schedules has about reached the limit of its productive capacity. Fortunately the lag in production promises to be of short duration, for the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commerce Department report that business outlays for new plant and equipment planned for the first quarter of 1951 are expected to exceed any previous first quarter; and allowing for seasonal adjustments will be the highest rate on record. Moreover, plant and equipment expenditures in the second half of the present year will about equal the record amount spent in the last half of 1948. This is cheering news. For, although inflation cannot be licked by increasing production, it will be much easier to establish effective controls over prices if supplies of goods are sufficient to meet essential Government and civilian needs.

WINTER SOLSTICE

World that burst into bud and leaf and flower,
Knowing Him risen, now let Winter be
Born of the dying Autumn in this hour
So short a time from His Nativity!
Always a promise of bloom is in God's Mind.
Accept this blight then—and three seasons done,
World that sought sadly a rock-sealed tomb to find
There in a garden, the Immortal One!
Wind, crumple these leaves and break each sapless stem.
Frost, burrow deep into the ground this night.
Two make their way nearer to Bethlehem
Under dark skies, reserving a great Light.
And World, take heart, being chastened toward that Morn
Dead grass shall hold the Flower of God, newborn!

Acheson's Record

Out here most of us cannot understand this hue and cry by many Republicans (not all) against the Secretary of State. Where is the bill of particulars against this man? Looking at his record without confusion we see him as a remarkable statesman.

For example, he fashioned the series of resolutions that our delegation had passed through the Assembly, giving that body the power to act and pass upon the aggressive actions of warlike nations and transferring, in effect, the power from the Security Council to the Assembly, thereby depriving Russia of the veto power and placing the united strength of a vast and overwhelming majority of the nations against aggression. This series of resolutions marks the high water level of statesmanship and strategy and for them alone Secretary Acheson must deserve highest praise.

Upon what theory should a statesman of this rank be now asked to resign and get out of public life?

"Gibraltar Again"

Your December 14 editorial in reference to Gibraltar may give rise to an erroneous impression with regard to the declaration made by the Spanish chief of state.

The statement referred to has no relationship whatsoever with the present European situation or its possible military consequences. It is motivated by the concession granted to Gibraltar by the British government in these last few days of a new and special government-charter, creating a legislative council.

As all Spaniards—from the extreme left to the right—consider with rare unanimity that Gibraltar forms an integral part of Spanish territory, occupied by English forces in 1704, they feel that any modification made in respect to the juridical status of that Spanish territory demands an immediate consideration from the Spanish government, maintaining its good rights.

The statement made by the Spanish chief of state could not have been more moderate. It expressly states that the question of Gibraltar can never be a cause for war but only of peaceful settlement, with a view to restore a violated right.

"Volunteer" War

Evacuate all our forces from Korea. It is useless and criminally wasteful of lives and materiel trying to fight the fanatical Red Chinese hordes of "volunteers" possessed of China's unlimited reserve cannon fodder.

"Allow" sufficient units of our Navy to "volunteer," in the same manner as the Chinese Communists, to effectively support a Nationalist Chinese amphibious landing on the mainland. (It might also be well to consider the augmenting of the Nationalist forces by fighting men from all over the world, many of whom have already offered their services.)

Sell the Nationalist Chinese as many of our newest, fastest, most powerful jet bombers and fighters as they need.

Sell the Nationalists as many atomic bombs as they believe they would require in the event that their land offensive against the Reds is not successful and they find it necessary to have their pilots, using their planes, drop their atomic bombs on whatever Red military and industrial concentrations they see fit.

We could accomplish much by this course of action: We could stop the needless, useless slaughter of our men. Communist China would be defeated. And—this is most important of all—this would be the strongest of deterrents to Russia.

Overtime Pay

The Washington Post says that there is a movement to increase the pay of Federal employes by making them work overtime. That is a cruel joke. Under the existing pay laws a Grade 15 employe making $10,000 a year is paid $38.48 per day for working Monday through Friday. His total pay, including "overtime" pay, for working eight hours overtime on Saturday is only $12.08 (one third of his regular pay); however, a Grade 1 employe making $2280 a year (the lowest-paid employe in the classified service) is paid $12.56 for working eight hours overtime on Saturday. A Grade 10 employe making $5000 a year or $19.20 a day Monday through Friday is paid a total of only $14.24 (including "overtime" pay) for working eight hours on Saturday. In other words, the "overtime" rate for Government employes making over $4000 a year is less than the regular rate.

If a man is worth $20 or $30 a day Monday through Friday, why is his work worth only $10 on Saturday? DISGUSTED.

God In The U. N.

The December 11 letter from Ottamar Hamele defending "an exclusion of God from the U. N." seems to call for comment.

Rather unreasonably, I think, he tries to compare our Supreme Court to the U. N. Rather more appropriate it would seem to me to compare our Government to the U. N.

For example, our President's have always been sworn into their office with a Bible under their hand. Our Congress has always had its chaplain and if Mr. Hamele will pull the coins out of his pocket he will read on each of them our acknowledgment of dependence on the Creator "In God We Trust."

If Mr. Hamele is either a Christian or a Jew he will know from reading the Bible, God demands this public acknowledgment of man's dependence on God.

Finally our own United States with its continual recognition throughout its history of the Creator and the Creator's endowment of man with his rights, has certainly proposed and risen to the position of the most powerful country in the world.

Can anyone make the claim that the so-called United Nations (excluding God as they do) is in anyway prospering in furthering peace in the world? Or for that matter being in any way united?

The day the United Nations flag is stamped "In God We Trust" that day will peace come to the world. JAMES F. STANTON.

Ireland And Atlantic Security

On April 18 of this year I had the honor to address the Overseas Writers Press Club at Washington on the subject of Ireland's place in the North Atlantic defense scheme.

At that time I urged the vital necessity of a sound political background to military planning, indicating from recent history (World War II) the disasters inherent in the failure of politicians to provide the military command with a realistic basis for their plans and operations. On such occasions the overlooking of some political factor not readily apparent to the military mind causes military action to be based on faulty premises.

I fear this has once again proved true in Korea both when the North Koreans attacked initially and when the Chinese invasion completely altered the military basis. Absence of a sound political background to military operations normally causes initial deployment of unduly weak forces within effective striking distance of a superior enemy. In such circumstances, I suggested, a wise commander should have in mind the worst possible case as well as the best possible case.

Fortunately reverses in Korea do not directly threaten the safety of the powerhouse and main base of the free world, the United States, to the degree that a similar series of defeats in northwestern Europe, resulting in the overrunning of the British Isles, would compromise American security.

Whoever the American designated to command in the northeastern Atlantic theater, he must remember that he cannot afford to ignore the worst possible case; indeed he must initially face the fact that that case already obtains, since there is nothing to prevent Russia from reaching the Atlantic coast and the Channel within three weeks of his assuming command and, should that occur, Russia will not repeat Hitler's unpreparedness for a trans-Channel operation. Russia's object will be the expulsion of America from Europe.

Initially the best he can hope to achieve will be the retention of the eastern Atlantic islands, Iceland, Britain, Ireland, and the Breton and Iberian peninsulas. It will be more important politically and strategically to arm and integrate Spain than to rebuild German forces. French "national redoubts" in Brittany and on the Garonne should have priority over a new Maginot Line, and a united reintegrated Ireland is vital to the over-all concept. Indeed his headquarters could better command from Limerick than from London or Paris.

Much as Americans will sympathize with those European nations in the Atlantic Pact for whom military security cannot at present be provided we must none of us sacrifice the substance for the shadow; for complete defense of the western European zone must remain a shadow until there are at least 50 efficient combat divisions deployed in Germany.

The retention of Britain must be the keystone of our immediate planning. Britain is perfectly able to guard her own southern and eastern coastline, but her situation would be gravely weakened were Russia to secure a footing in central Ireland in conjunction with an invasion of Britain. Russia might well invade Ireland by air with impunity at the most critical moment for Britain. Free Ireland, outside the Atlantic Pact, and excluded from participation in the pact, because of her dispute with Britain over northern Ireland could not at present dispose of a Russian airborne invasion.

Thus a divided Ireland becomes the Achilles heel of Atlantic Pact strategy and will remain so for at least two more critical years. Alternatively, an integrated and reunited Ireland, defended by Irishmen in conjunction with the United States of America, provides an absolutely secure base for the defense of the Atlantic fringe of western Europe, which is all of Europe our means will allow us to defend with certainty.

In this context the defense of Ireland becomes of greater importance to the Atlantic community than the defense of London. It is the bounden duty of the high political chiefs to give their military chief a clearcut political background against which he can plan realistic strategy. He must be free to deal with Ireland, Spain, Portugal, and France as well as with Britain without cramping political restrictions.

Making Men Out of Boys

By Malvina Lindsay

Overnight Job

THE ARMED forces call for more and more men—and they want them young, possibly as young as 18. Talk of universal military service grows on Capitol Hill and elsewhere. Industry considers how in an emergency it could use teenage boy and girl students under draft age on a part-time basis.

All of this falls on an age group that only yesterday was being considered and treated as virtually belonging in the nursery. Hence there is urgent need to prepare for the long pull ahead those on whom mobilization falls hardest.

Today's mobilization is made more difficult because no one sees its end. Young men can't say, "Let's enlist and get the dirty job over with," as they did in the last two wars. World tension, danger, even conflict, may continue indefinitely. Yet Americans by temperament are not fitted for sustained strain.

No wonder so many young men and women feel confused and bewildered, wondering whether to enlist or wait, whether to go on to school and plan for peace careers or to accept stoically the prospect of years of serving a military economy.

MANY OF these were children of the depression. Because of the low birth rate of that era, their generation is a relatively small one. Hence a high percentage of their number must feel the burden of defense. Sometimes they ask: "Why is our generation being picked on?"

Many American teen-agers are young emotionally and mentally for their years. Adolescence is prolonged, especially in middle and upper income groups. In World War II it was found that 40 percent of men in service had never lived away from their parents, 15 percent had never lived away from home more than a week, and an additional 20 percent never away from home more than a month.

How is such youth being motivated to meet today's mobilization demands? This question was recently asked by Dr. William C. Menninger, psychiatrist, of the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kans. He warned against a negative, fatalistic attitude on the part of draftees toward Selective Service.

While Communist China is using emotional propaganda of the most primitive sort . . . "respond to the call of your fatherland . . . to keep the dirty swine's lips from intruding through the fence of our beautiful garden" . . . in arousing and indoctrinating young men for battle, this country must depend on reason, truth, responsibility. And American youth is often confused by hearing not only one "line" but several, including those of critics of current procedure.

What then can be done to step up maturity of American youth? Some would lower the age limit for voting to 18 in the belief that this would set teen-agers earlier to serious thought. Others say this would merely increase the number of voting Charlie McCarthys with parent ventriloquists. But some lowering of the voting age—if nothing more than a year—might help.

THERE IS growing sentiment for universal military service—for a two-year period beginning at 18—to give youth physical and mental preparedness for active service. Yet its opponents insist military leaders are not capable of such direction, that youth's best chance of getting a faith to fight for is to stay in school as long as possible.

However the abrupt jump from boy to man, from school or home to the realities of training camp is a hard dose for a 19-year-old in present-day America to take. The shock may exact long psychological toll later. Some definite intermediate program between the two is needed.

Ideally this program should begin in the home when the future defenders of their country are under 6. But the realities we face are that millions of young men in their late teens are being called to active fighting and will continue to be called. They can't be taken back to the kindergarten.

One difficulty is that the average youth, no more than his parents, understands in simple terms the great shift in world power that has imperiled the kind of life to which he is accustomed. In addition, his elders have been too cringing about the human mistakes of the past. When youth has complained, "Look at the mess of a world you've handed us" they've failed to say, "And look at the civilized world all of us have fallen heir to, one full of comforts, conveniences, personal freedom, one containing the storehouse of Western civilization. If we don't like this world enough to defend it, how about going back to the Dark Ages or even to that of Neanderthal man?"

Because of a typographical error, the last sentence in the Thursday column by Malvina Lindsay contained the term "Disinterested" tyranny in referring to Communist practices. It should have been "disinterred" tyranny.

"Combat Pay"

I should like to congratulate you on your forthright December 13 editorial on "Combat Pay." I think that any study of casualties from Korea should stifle Air Force and Naval arguments against the awarding of "hazardous duty" pay to the fighting soldiers of the Army. As far as I know, no one is suggesting that those members of the Air Force and Navy who are currently awarded "hazardous duty" pay be required to give it up. Consequently their objection to awarding such pay to infantrymen and artillerymen confronting the enemy from foxholes on a 24-hour a day basis, just doesn't make sense. ROBERT F. COCKLIN.

Soldier-Diplomat

By Marquis Childs

Eisenhower As Supreme Commander

NEW YORK—The big man in the blue-gray suit and the bright blue tie paces up and down beside his desk. Through the big windows looking out on the campus you can see the classes changing.

Childs

President Dwight D. Eisenhower of Columbia University is being called back to active duty. He is returning to what he calls the soldier business. And the curious thing is how his case in many ways matches that of thousands upon thousands of other veterans throughout the country.

He'd really just begun to settle down in his civilian job. There were a lot of things he liked about it and some that he didn't. Now this has happened as it has happened to so many others.

His wife the other day figured up that of one tour of duty or another he had been out of the country for 13 years and separated from her most of that time. She said as I'm sure thousands of other wives are saying to thousands of other husbands, "But why couldn't it be a younger man? Why did it have to be you?"

General Eisenhower knows very well the answer to that question. He is to be named supreme commander of the North Atlantic defense force because he is the only man who will inspire the confidence and the conviction in the creation of a force made up of many nations joined by the single idea of preserving their freedom in the face of Communist imperialism. He is being called up because he has the know-how which again fits the case of so many others who fought through that other war and are now wondering why they have to be torn abruptly out of civilian life.

General Ike has the prestige and the acceptance both at home and in Europe which may make it possible to do an all but impossible job. He's had quite a few letters already from comrades in arms across the seas asking how soon he is coming over. One the other day came from Monty—Field Marshal Lord Montgomery—who commanded British armies on the Continent after D Day in 1944.

IKE IS NOT sure now soon he will go. It is one of the manifold uncertainties plaguing the veteran about to be uprooted again. The announcement of his appointment is likely to come after Secretary of State Dean Acheson meets with the Foreign Ministers in Brussels, or it may come earlier.

And then being realistic about his job and its significance Eisenhower believes he should go to Europe at once. A waiting period would tend to nullify the psychological value of what should be an act of unity and resolution on the part of the free world.

About the terms of his job as supreme commander, what it will mean in the way of problems and difficulties, he knows little. While the general has conferred from time to time in Washington with both military and civilian defense chiefs, he has not asked them to spell it out because he knew they were still pretty much in the dark themselves.

But as he sees it, the supreme commander will be at least as much a diplomat as a soldier. He will be responsible for reconciling governments and commanders. In considerable part it will consist of picking up the threads that he had woven together with great skill as commander of the Allied forces in World War II.

It will not mean, as the newly-drafted veteran visualizes it, working out the details of command relationship as between one force and another. That will be left to his deputy and to others specifically responsible for creating the necessary machinery of command.

OF ONE serious shortcoming Eisenhower is acutely conscious. For a proper beginning there should be additional American divisions stationed in Europe at once. But virtually all of America's foot soldiers are 10,000 miles away on the Korean peninsula in a do-or-die effort to escape from an overwhelmingly superior foe.

General Ike doesn't beef about that. He knows it is too late to beef and the danger is so great that each man who is called must try to do his duty as best he can.

The comparison with the combat veteran called back to active service breaks down, of course, at many points. General Ike wrote a book and made a lot of money out of it. As a five-star general he has a salary and allowances that will always take care of his family. And he will not resign from the presidency of Columbia, but go on a leave of absence with the blessing of the board of trustees.

If there should be no war, he would return in a year or so. That is one of the points of difference—he is saying now that if it come to a shooting war, a younger man must assume the command that he held in World War II.

Yet the similarities are there, too. He and his wife are talking about what they should do. Should she go to Europe with him? Or divide her time between her husband and her parents who are growing old. It's a problem. The man in the blue-gray suit sometimes talks like one of the thousands of GIs who fought under him in that other war, the war that seems at times to have happened so long ago. And yet measured by the pitiful interval of "peace," Ike and the others feel it was only yesterday.

British View On China

By Sir Oliver Franks

The British Ambassador in a speech yesterday to the Executives' Club in Chicago.

. . . BRITAIN HAS thought that the representatives of the Central Peoples Government should occupy the Chinese seat in the United Nations. The United States opposes the seating of the Chinese Communist representatives. This is a real difference of view. . . . The difference has its roots in the past. It is now nearly a year since the British Government recognized the Central Peoples Government of China. The United States then recognized and continues to recognize Chiang Kai-shek and his government of China. I want to say a little about this problem where our approach has been different from yours.

I know that in some quarters it is a controversial matter. I realize, too, the beliefs and the feelings which are involved in any discussion of it, especially at the present time, when severe casualties are being inflicted upon members of your armed forces by the soldiers of the Central Peoples Government. Yet. . . I would remind you that the soldiers of the Central Peoples Government have inflicted casualties upon our smaller British forces also.

WE IN BRITAIN have tried to take a long view about the great changes now in process in the vast continent of Asia. In that continent whole peoples are intellectually and spiritually on trek. Nationalism, in a manner unknown there until the present century, is strong and vigorous. Many of the nations of Asia have entered the Machine Age.

We believe it to be of great importance that the free world remains large as it is today and does not shrink to the peninsula of western Europe and the great continental island of your hemisphere. We think a great deal about that great arc of countries in Asia which swings from Cairo to Tokyo beneath the vast land mass of the Soviets.

At the end of the Second World War we decided that the new forces in Asia demanded recognition and acttion by us in a great area in which we had direct responsibilities, the area of south Asia. We therefore worked out with India, with Pakistan and with Ceylon, their membership of the free peoples of the world . . .

WE THINK THAT SOME of the same tendencies which have worked so powerfully in India, Pakistan and Ceylon have been at work for many years in the ancient civilization of China. The spirit of nationalism is strong, and so is the determination that China should have her say in the world. As we see it, Chiang Kai-shek in his earlier years was successful in harnessing the hope and enthusiasm of nationalist sentiment to the cause. In later years he failed to do so and nationalist feeling in China drifted away, finally attaching itself in large part to his Communist opponents.

In Britain we are not under delusions about the Chinese Communists. We believe them to be Communists in belief and practice. We do not think that they and their government are something else masquerading in disguise. But it is a fact, in our view, that they have gathered to their support much of the sympathies and aspirations of Nationalist China. For this reason they have been able to conquer the Chinese mainland and today are masters of it.

IN OUR VIEW diplomatic recognition of a country does not involve either approval or disapproval. It is simply a question of fact. The Central Peoples Government governs the mainland of China; that is the fact we have recognized, and because we have recognized it we have thought it wise to support the candidacy of the Central Peoples Government for China's seat in the United Nations.

We are not convinced that the combination of communism and nationalism in China will always obey the orders of the Kremlin. We have observed in the case of the Communist government in Moscow strong nationalists and imperialist elements. That is largely what makes them a threat to the free world today. It seems to us that it is not to be assumed in the long term that the governments of China and Russia will always want the same things or pursue the same policies or the one be subservient to the other. That has not been so in the past.

FOR THE PRESENT we do not dispute that there is a great coincidence of interest, any more than we dispute the genuineness of the Communism of the Chinese Communists. Yet in view of the long term forces at work in the continent of Asia, and particularly that of rising nationalism, we have not wanted to enforce upon the Chinese Government a situation in which they could have relations only with Moscow and therefore feel that they had no other recourse.

These are the reasons which have lain behind our actions. Our attitude has not been determined, as has sometimes been suggested, by economic considerations and questions of our trade with China and the future of Hong Kong. That these things have also been in our mind I do not wish to deny, but it would be untrue to claim that they have had major weight in inclining us to the opinions we have formed and the actions we have taken . . .

Pearson Says He May Sue

that his record of fighting Communism was well known to everyone except the "headline happy" Senator McCarthy.

Pearson said he had been given special citations for fighting communism. He said they were given by the American Legion, by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, by President Vincent Auriol of France and Premier Alcide de Gasperi of Italy.

Pearson said McCarthy has been coining a fortune filling lecture engagements at high fees "thanks to the unfair publicity he makes for himself on the Senate floor."

"As for David Karr," Pearson added, "if he is pro-Communist, the Washington Monument is a hole in the ground.

"When Western Europe faced its worst threat of communism in 1947 it has been said that nothing did more to head off communism than the Friendship Train. It so happens that I sent Karr to Europe in advance where he did a magnificent job organizing for the reception of 10 Friendship Trains in France and four in Italy. He was materially responsible for making clear to the people in Western Europe that the American people were their friends."

Pearson said that last spring he offered to pay McCarthy's court expenses if the Senator would drop his immunity in the "many unfair attacks he made on defenseless people."

"Even with a written guarantee of his expenses paid, he would not make his statements off the Senate floor," said Pearson.

"My attorney advises me that McCarthy's failure on the floor to deliver the actual text of the mimeographed copies he passed out to the press nullifies the cloak of immunity on that part of his speech which was undelivered. If my attorney is correct, I shall sue him on the undelivered portion of his speech."

Karr issued the following statement on the McCarthy speech:

"Senator McCarthy and I have known each other a long time. He has known me as a newspaperman. I have known him as a headline hunter.

"Within his lying heart, McCarthy knows that I am not and never have been a member of the Communist Party. He knows that I am and never have been a fellow traveler. He knows, on the contrary, that I have been personally active in many ways in the fight against national and international communism. I challenge him to repeat his charges about me where he will not be protected by congressional immunity. It is my hope he will do so since I will then be able to sue him for libel."

McCarthy Says Pearson Is Red 'Voice'

6. "A sugar-coated voice of Russia."

7. "A Moscow-directed character assassin."

McCarthy also quoted President Truman and the late President Franklin Roosevelt and a number of Congressmen as having called Pearson a liar.

He said he would repeat his charges outside the libel-proof atmosphere of the Senate chamber if Person would make all his and wife's property available as the target of counter-suit.

Quotes Dies

McCarthy said that a Pearson associate is David Karr. He quoted former Congressman Martin Dies (D., Tex.) as saying a David Karr who in 1943 was employed by the Office of War Information had previously been on the staff of the Communist Daily Worker. He also quoted Representative George H. Dondero (R., Mich.) as calling Pearson "the voice of David Karr, formerly with the Daily Worker."

McCarthy for himself added "it appears that Pearson never actually signed up as a member of the Communist Party and never paid dues. However, that hasn't in any way affected his value to the Party—nor has it affected his willingness to follow the orders of David Karr who, of course, is a most active member of the Party and who carries instructions and orders to Pearson."

McCarthy said he has been told by a number of ex-Communists that Pearson's big job under direction of Karr was "to lead the character assassination of any man who was a threat to international Communism."

"One of Pearson's extremely important tasks was the destruction in the eyes of the American people of Chiang-Kai-shek," said McCarthy.

Says He "Hounded" Forestal

McCarthy then accused Pearson of "hounding" the late James V. Forrestal to his death. Forrestal, a former Secretary of Defense, leaped to his death from a window in Naval Hospital at Bethesda in May, 1949. McCarthy said "he (Pearson) and the Communist Party murdered James Forrestal in just as cold blood as though they had machine gunned him."

McCarthy also accused Pearson of undertaking to destroy General of the Army Douglas MacArthur.

McCarthy called on the newspapers that buy Pearson's column and the radio stations that carry his broadcasts to "see that this voice of international Communism is stilled."

McCarhty said the public "can notify the Adams Hat Co. by actions what they think of their sponsoring this man." The hat company sponsors Pearson's radio program.

"It should be remembered," said McCarthy, "any store that stocks Adams hat, anyone who buys from a store that stocks an Adams hat is unknowingly contributing at least something to the cause of international communism by keeping this Communist spokesman on the air."

In New York, Charles V. Molesworth, president of Adam Hat Stores, Inc., said McCarthy's requested boycott of his firm's products was "unwarranted." He pointed out that Pearson's "statements, opinions and personal activities in no way reflect or represent the opinions, attitudes and policies of Adam Hat Stores, Inc."

Entombed Miner Is Rescued After 54-Hour Effort

SELLECK, Wash., Dec. 15 (AP). Rescuers brought 54-year-old John Wolti to the surface of the Big 4 Coal Mine safetly tonight, 54 hours and 25 minutes after he was trapped by an avalanche 400 feet below just after noon Wednesday.

Dr. Gordon Adams said Wolti had a broken arm. He had been pinned beneath a timber which had to be jacked up in the cramped three-by-five foot hole at the foot of the shaft from which he was freed.

"He's in fair condition," Dr. Adams said.

He had been given up for dead yesterday as searchers labored to clear the mass of rock, timbers and debris in the foot of the shaft, but when his voice was heard today, workers renewed efforts to reach him.

Migratory Labor Unit Continued by Truman

President Truman issued an executive order yesterday extending the life of the President's Commission on Migratory Labor to March 1, 1951. The commission had been slated to expire December 15.

2 Chinese Red U. N. Envoys Call Press Conference

FLUSHING, N. Y., Dec. 15 (U.P.). Communist China's two top envoys to the United Nations tonight scheduled their first press conference for Saturday after they conferred with U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie.

Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan, Peiping's top representative here, and his No. 1 assistant, Gen. Chaio Kung-hua, talked at Lake Success with Lie from 6 p. m. until 7:15 p. m. and then asked for the press conference at 3 p. m. Saturday.

Observers believed the Communists would make an important announcement, but one source did not expect anything "particularly good for the West."

The Chinese Communists' sudden willingness to talk coincided today with the beginning of the U. N. cease-fire team's mediation efforts.

N. Y. Tries to Dissolve Workers Order as Red

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (AP).—New York State today moved to dissolve the International Workers Order, Inc., a national fraternal benefit society, on the ground that it is "dominated by the Communist Party."

A motion asking dissolution of the society, reputed to have 162,000 members, was filed with the State Supreme Court by Walter F. Brooks, deputy State superintendent of insurance.

Brooks said in an affidavit the society was organized under auspices of the Communist Party in 1930 after a number of Communist Party members and sympathizers withdrew from another fraternal organization, the Workmen's Circle.

If you were missed in the Community Chest canvass, you can still give by calling ME. 6262 and making your pledge today. A volunteer will pick up your contribution at your convenience.

out an adequate training establishment," he declared, "would in the opinion of most military men injure the defense effort, shock our production economy and rob defense plants of the manpower so vital to rapid conversion and expansion of defense industry and rapid production of defense weapons."

During the hearings, Defense Secretary George Marshall expressed fears that going into total mobilization under present conditions might lead to difficulties. He wondered how the American people would react to a long mobilization program without a shooting war. Besides, Marshall added, we must expand our munitions production before greatly enlarging the armed forces.

Only opposition to House passage of the big apropriation bill yesterday came from lame-duck Representative Vito Marcantonio, New York left-winger, who called the rearmament plan an "insane program of war and despair."

The total includes $16,845,181,000 for the military establishment and almost one billion dollars for the Atomic Energy Commission.

The only change made by the House during five hours of debate was elimination, on a technicality, of a 224 million-dollar allotment for the Maritime Commission to build some fast cargo vessels.

Representative Cannon (D., Mo.) asked approval of the big bill and described it as the first installment on a "preparedness program that will extend to astronomical heights." He is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Even as Cannon spoke, Mr. Truman sent Congress a new request for an extra $1,834,911,000 for stockpiling more strategic and critical materials.

A White House statement, announcing Mr. Truman's action, said the stockpiling program must be speeded up in view of recent world developments.

The additional money would make a total of $2,923,911,000 for the stockpiling program in the current fiscal year ending next June 30.

The committee trimmed amounts sought for the Atomic Energy Commission, the National Advisery Committee for Aeronautics, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Subversive Activities Control Board created by the new antisubversive law.

The total is $260,641,610 lower than the amounts proposed by the President through the Budget Bureau. The largest cut—$210,000,000—was made in the $1,050,000,000 sought by the Atomic Energy Commission for an expansion of atom bomb production.

The bill carries $7,854,700 to build new quarters for the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, now located at 7th st. and Independence ave. It will be part of the Army Medical Center.

The new allotment for the Army, the Navy and the Air Force would boost defense appropriations to almost 42 billion dollars for the fiscal year ending next June 30.

Vets' Tax-Free Travel Approved by Truman

President Truman yesterday signed into law a bill granting members of the Armed Services exemption from Federal transportation taxes when traveling on leave or furlough.

Some railroads, in addition, have also put voluntarily into effect special furlough rates over the Christmas holidays.

Long Term Contract

Williams Becomes 'Fish Professional'

MR THEODORE WILLIAMS, "FISH PROFESSIONAL"
... He Hooks a Couple of Beauties on a Florida Fishing Trip

By Low Black

BRISTOL, Conn., Dec. 15 (AP).—The signing of Ted Williams, the noted baseballer, to a long term contract as a consultant to Horton Bristol Mfg. Co., manufacturers of fishing equipment, was announced here today.

The new job as a so-called "fish professional" will not interfere with the hard-hitting Boston Red Sox outfielder's baseball career, it was emphasized by Williams and President Graham Treadway of the local company.

But, it was stressed that Ted signed with an eye to the future—"say in five years or so when he checks out of baseball as a player."

Williams, whose bat earns him baseball's fattest salary check, is well known among fishermen not only as a proficient fly and bait caster, but as a technical expert in the design of equipment.

SPECIFICALLY, explained Treadway, Williams, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1946 and 1949, will assist here in the design of tackles, the testing of Bristol Horton products, and help in promotion of the company's conservation and youth programs.

How much time Williams will devote to these assignments while active in baseball will be up to him. Nobody wanted to answer salary questions.

As a starter, however, he is currently reported to be currently engaged in setting up the Ted Williams Open Fishing Tournament slated to be held in Florida, probably in February. The plans are, Treadway said, for Williams, golf pro Sam Snead, with whom he is fishing now in the Florida Keys, and numerous other ball players and golf celebrities to test their fishing skill against each other and any fishermen who may want to compete against the big sports names.

REACHER IN FLORIDA today, Williams told local newsmen during a telephone conversation that "next to baseball, fishing has always been my major interest. That's why I visited a number of tackle manufacturers right after the baseball season ended a few months ago."

Treadway broke into the conversation here to explain that Williams' down-to-earth suggestions made during his visit here at that time so interested me that I urged him then and there to join us as consultant.

"You can say," said Williams, who took over again, "This opportunity appealed to me particularly because I've always hoped to build a career in this work when I finally hang up my baseball shoes."

Dave Bannerman Married, Navy Will Discharge Him

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 15 (AP).—The romance of the middie and the typist was known to all today, and it meant the end of his Navy career.

Midshipman David Vance Bannerman, the Navy's star fullback, was married to Monette J. Chaney, daughter of an Annapolis professor, last Saturday.

The secret couldn't be kept, so Bannerman will be honorably discharged from the service.

Dismissal is automatic. Navy regulations say a Midshipman "found to be married shall be recommended for discharge." A spokesman said Vice Admiral Harry W. Hill, academy superintendent, has taken all the necessary steps.

Capt. Robert T. S. Keith said the Academy had confirmed the marriage and that Bannerman's "discharge is being effected." Keith is secretary of the academic board and an aide to the superintendent.

The 22-year-old first classman, from Carolina Beach, N. C., who would have been commissioned in June, was still at the Academy.

"I really don't know where we'll go," petite Monette said today. "It depends on what Dave

Dave Also Misses North-South Game

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 15 (AP).—Coach Andy Gustafson of the Shrine's all-star South squad said today "we're going to have to get along without Dave Bannerman in the Christmas Day game."

He had been selected as a back in the North-South charity clash here and was to have reported Sunday.

"I hate to lose him," said Gustafson. "I have no choice but to drop him from the roster because each player must represent a school I most sincerely wish him every happiness."

Arizin Leads Philadelphia Against Caps Here Tonight

Paul Arizin, a sensational rookie who has stolen the scoring thunder of his veteran teammate, Joe Fulks, leads the Eastern Division leading Philadelphia Warriors against Washington in an 8:30 N.B.A. game at Uline Arena tonight.

Arizin, 6 feet 4 inches, already holds the collegiate scoring record for the National Guard Armory here with 33 points for Villanova against Georgetown last January.

The way he has been hitting for the Warriors indicates that Uline's pro record of 35 points, held jointly by Bob Feerick and Max Zaslofsky, may be within his reach, too.

Paul has an 18.6 average. Fulks, onetime pro scoring champ, has averaged 15.9 this season.

Caps Give Philly Assist

The perked up Caps will have their hands full with this pair, which is the hottest one-two punch in the league at this time. The Warriors took over Eastern Division leadership two nights ago.

They got an assist from the Caps Wednesday when Washington bumped off Boston, 110-79, when the Celtics were on top of the standings.

After a slump which saw them lose seven out of eight games, the Caps have split even in their last four. Besides Boston, they defeated strong New York.

Scolari Leads Cap Scorers

The improvement was noticeable after Dick Schnittker and Bill Sharman, rookies, came off the injury list. Both of those lads are averaging about 10 points per game, and with "old reliable" Fred Scolari and his 14-point average, they make Washington a threat.

In a 7:15 preliminary, Northwest Settlement House meets the Boys Club All Stars.

MacMillan Quits Tri-City Team; Logan Now Coach

MOLINE, Ill., Dec. 15 (AP).—Dave MacMillan, former University of Minnesota basketball coach, quit tonight as coach of the Tri-City Blackhawks of the National Basketball Association.

MacMillan had served two months of a three-year contract. His club had won nine and lost 13 games.

Johnny Logan, 31-year-old veteran guard, was named player-coach of the Blackhawks.

2 NFL Title Games Carried on Radio, Giants-Browns on TV

The New York Giants-Cleveland Browns game Sunday in Cleveland for the American Division Championship of the National Football League will be broadcast and televised locally. The game will be carried on WMAL-TV, channel seven, and WOL, 1450 on the dial, starting at 1.25 p. m.

At 4 o'clock, WOL will swing out to Los Angeles and pick up the Rams-Chicago Bears contest for the National Division title.

Unbeaten Navy Host to Harvard Today

Harvard at Navy and Davis and Elkins at American are the toppers on today's area collegiate basketball bill.

The Crimson, fresh from a 72-37 thrashing by Holy Cross, play the undefeated Middies in Annapolis at 2:30 p. m. American, beaten only three times at home in three seasons, entertains Davis and Elkins, which did the trick twice, at 8:45 p. m.

In an afternoon game, Gallaudet plays Salisbury (Md.) Teachers, 3:30 p. m., at Jefferson Junior High gym.

Last year in the Boston Garden, Navy nosed out Harvard, 70-68.

Captain Ed Smith, 6 feet, 6 inches, and Dick Lionette, 6-4, led them to victories over M.I.T. and Wesleyan before they lost to Brown and Holy Cross.

Navy, led by Joe Fitzpatrick and Bill Wilson, has defeated Franklin and Marshall and Western Maryland easily.

Both Davis and Elkins and A.U. boast 3-1 records. The Eagles have wins over Quantico, Towson and Catholic, and a loss to Penn State. D. & E. beat Shenandoah twice and Concord State before losing to West Virginia Tech.

Navy-Harvard Game Broadcast, Telecast

Today's basketball game between Harvard and Navy will be both televised and broadcast. Station WOL (1450) will broadcast the game at 2:30 p. m. and WTOP-TV, channel nine, will televise the game. The telecast begins at 2:15.

Little Hoyas, DeMatha Are Upset in Openers

Upsets featured the opening of the Catholic League last night. In a doubleheader played at DeMatha, St. Paul's defeated Georgetown Prep, 37-34, and St. Anthony's beat DeMatha, 62-56.

Both games were won in the third quarter. Georgetown Prep was ahead, 22-15, at halftime and seemed well on its way to a victory. Then St. Paul's came through 15 points in the third quarter while holding the Preppers to 5 to gain a three point lead they held the rest of the game.

DeMatha, playing without the services of its star center, Frank Fuqua, 6-7, flash, held a 31-26, halftime advantage. Then St. Anthony's, led by Bob Hall and Tom Cassidy, went on a 20 point scoring spree. DeMatha could get only 12 points in the period and found itself on the short end of a 46-41 count at the end of the third quarter.

Ace Manning of St. Paul's was the high scorer in the game with Georgetown Prep. He has 14 points. Tom Cassidy had 17 points and Bob Hall 25 for St. Anthony's.

Caps Stay Here

Foster Cancels Sales Talks

General Manager Bob Foster said yesterday that he doesn't want to talk anymore about selling the Caps, and he has called off a meeting with Ben Kerner on the subject.

Kerner, executive director of Tri-City, offered to buy the Caps and move them to Tri-City. Foster, earlier, turned him down twice, but agreed to meet him either here or in New York today or Monday.

"The more I thought about it, the sillier it seemed," said Foster yesterday, "so I've decided not to discuss it further with him. His offer was peanuts. It couldn't be taken seriously.

"Why I could sell my players on waivers to the other clubs and get as much money as Kerner offered," said Foster.

The Caps' general manager had said repeatedly that the team was not on the market, but if anyone wanted to put up $50,000, he'd at least consult with the Caps' owner, Mike Uline.

Kerner's offer was believed to be about $10,000.

Hoyas Get Lift Out of American's 'Good Luck' Wire

American University's basketball team set a standard for sportmanship around these parts Thursday night when Georgetown met Long Island U. in Madison Square Garden.

While the Hoya sophs were pacing nervously in their hotel before the game, they received this telegram, "Good luck tonight. American U. is rooting for Georgetown." It was signed LeRoy Ishman, captain, and the basketball squad.

The Hoyas lost to Long Island, 75-66. Their next opponent is A. U. at Uline Arena Tuesday night.

Sports Editor Says Senator Johnson To Succeed Chandler

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 15 (AP).—George Edmond, Sports Editor of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, said today he was reliably informed that Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) would be named Baseball Commissioner to succeed Happy Chandler.

Johnson is president of the Western League.

Edmond declined to reveal the source of his information, but said it was the same from which he learned, a week ahead of the announcement, that Branch Rickey would go to the Pittsburgh Ball Club.

Colonials Freeze Ball For Final Two Minutes

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Ace Adler was George Washington's ace in the hole last night, tapping in a field goal with two minutes left to down the University of Virginia, 58-56, at Uline Arena.

Then the Colonials snook off the various blocks, clips and tackles of the Cavaliers to freeze them out the rest of the way.

It was certainly one of the roughest basketball games ever staged here. Bucky Buscher and Dave Kaufman called 51 fouls.

Rugged Game

Both teams were charging hard and seldom was it that there weren't two or three players sprawled on the floor. Both teams played ragged ball, G. W. controlling the backboards with its superior height, but scrapping Virginia, checking close and breaking up G. W.'s passing game.

The score was tied four times at 11, 51, 54 and 56, before Adler followed up a long shot by Kenny Kern with the clinching tap-in.

Mohl Misses 10 Fouls

Little Vic Mohl, who kept Virginia in the game with his 17 points, missed 10 free throws.

Twice the Colonials moved into commanding leads only to have the scrapping Cavaliers come back to threaten. In the first five and a half minutes, G. W. pulled ahead, 10-2, before Jake Donner, an Alexandrian, dropped in a set shot for Virginia's first field goal.

Virginia Ties It at 11-11

Within two minutes Virginia climbed into an 11-11 deadlock, Frankie Allen's breakaway layup tying it.

Then Cerra, Erdenbaum and Kern began hitting and G. W. pulled away to a 31-17 lead. At which point, Coach Bill Reinhart yanked the Colonials regulars. Against the reserves, Mohl paced a Virginia comeback that cut its deficit to 33-31. Mohl had a chance to tie it but muffed two free throw chances and at intermission, G. W. led, 38-35.

G. W.'s first liners came back in and stretched their lead to 47-38, when again Virginia began to recuperate. With six minutes left, Gil Hooper put in two foul shots and Virginia had a 51 all tie. Allen's set shot put the Cavaliers ahead for the only time, 53-51, but Cerra got that one back, and it was nip and tuck until Adler's clincher.

The win was G. W.'s second in four games. Virginia's record dropped to two wins against five setbacks.

In the preliminary, GW's undefeated freshmen whipped the Arlington Hall soldiers, 73-56, for their third straight win. John Holup and Elliot Karver led the young Colonials with 20 and 19 points.

'The Babe' Leads Women Golf Winners

MIAMI Fla., Dec. 15 (AP).—Babe Didrickson Zaharias, woman athlete of the half-century, captured virtually all of the Women's Professional Golf Association honors and earned an unprecedented $14,800 in prize money during 1950.

Fred Corcoran, women's PGA tournament director, today listed the top 10 women professionals. The Babe was far out in front.

Mrs. Zaharias, who was voted by the Nation's sports editors in the Associated Press poll as the top woman athlete of the past 50 years, won six major tournaments including the grueling 14-hole Weathervane Tournament played on four golf courses.

She placed first in the women's United States Open, the Weathervane Cross-Country, the All-American the World's Tournament, Western Open and Title-Holders Tournament at Augusta Ga.

Patty Berg of Minneapolis, Minn., placed second in Corcoran's poll with three tournament victories, the Eastern Open, Hardscabble at Fort Smith, Ark., and the Carrollton (Ga.) Open.

Louise Suggs, Atlanta, Ga., was listed as third. The remainder follow in this order: Betty Jameson, San Antonio, Tex.; Alice Bauer Midland, Tex., and her sister Marlene Bauer, also of Midland; Helen Dettwiler, Indio Calif.; Shirley Spork, Detroit Mich.; Sally Sessions, Detroit and Betty Hicks, Long Beach Calif.

DiGirolamo's 2 Fouls Win for Gonzaga, 49-47

Two free throws by Frankie DiGirolamo with two minutes left gave Gonzaga's Eagles a 49-47 triumph over Anacostia High last night at Anacostia.

After DiGirolamo's two charity tosses, the Eagles gained possession by an Anacostia foul with a minute and a half remaining. Gonzaga froze the ball until the last 15 seconds, when Buddy English got hold of it for Anacostia, but missed on a desperation shot.

Skippy Ryan of Anacostia was the game's high scorer with 22 points, and Jerry LeCompte was high for Gonzaga with 16.

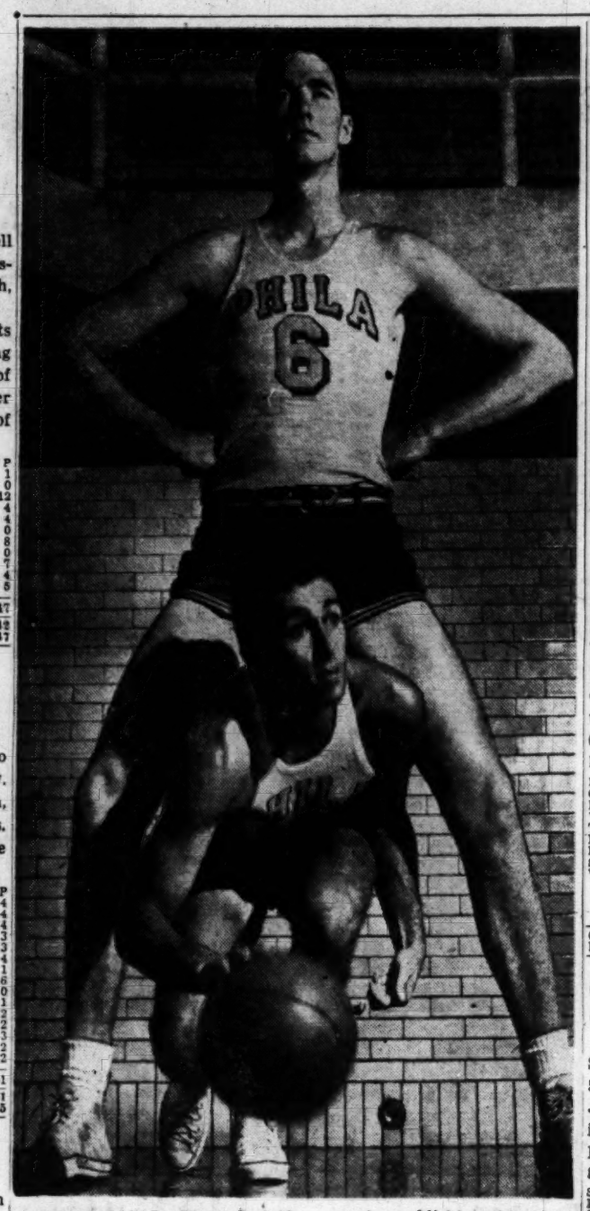
Flashes Flashy

The YMCA Flashes routed Trinidad Church, 61-25, last night at 1732 G st., nw. Jack Spear led the victors with 12 points; John Sullivan was high for Trinidad with seven.



IMPRACTICAL—The principal reason for publishing this picture is that it is a little different from most basketball pictures . . . and the Washington Caps can use the publicity for tonight's game with the Philadelphia Warriors at Uline Arena. The tall guy is Ronnie Livingstone, 6-foot-10 center of the Warriors. The little guy dribbling between Livingstone's legs is Nelson Bobb, a mere 6-footer.

ered by the wage boosts are the Naval Gun Factory, Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Naval Research Laboratory, Andrews Field, Fort Myer, the Military District of Washington, Potomac River Naval Command, Bethesda Naval Hospital, and the Army Medical Center.

JOBS: The Veterans Administration will hire 400 persons here who can be trained to be card-punch operators. Applicants will be required to type at least 25 words a minute. Those who pass typing and aptitude tests will be trained for 30 days before they are placed on jobs. Starting salary is $2450. Hiring will start immediately and those selected will report on January 2. Apply in Room 2057 of the Munitions Building, 20th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

EXPANSION: The House Appropriations Committee yesterday recommended funds to hire upwards of 220,000 additional Federal employes, most of whom would be in the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

No more than 12,000 of the new jobs would be in this city. Army and Navy would get 3000 new jobs each at headquarters here. In addition, there would be other new jobs at military installations here and nearby such as the Naval Gun Factory, hospitals, airfields, and so forth.

The funds, if approved as expected, would raise the total number of civilians in the military agencies to 1,232,000. Of this number 526,000 would be in the Army, 424,000 in the Navy, 250,000 in the Air Force, and 32,000 in the Mutual Defense Assistance program.

NCPPC Plans For Dispersal Bill Forwarded

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday forwarded to the Senate Public Works Committee its proposals for amending the dispersal bill now before Congress.

Details of the proposals were not made public but John Nolen, Jr., planning director, said they involve the planning phases of the dispersal program, and if adopted would permit the NCPPC to operate in the 20-mile proposed dispersal radius and provide Federal as well as District funds for the NCPPC's operation.

The NCPPC is limited now to operating in the District and its immediate environs.

The Public Works Committee, headed by Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.), will continue its hearing Monday.

The planning commissioners, who ended their two-day meeting yesterday, will meet again January 25 and 26.

Children Under 12 Top Crime List

Children under 12 committed more robberies and thefts in November in the District than any other juvenile-age group.

This was disclosed yesterday in Juvenile Court statistics for the month released by Judge Edith H. Cockrill. She said similar data would be issued each month to keep the newspapers and the public informed of the juvenile delinquency picture and the work of the court.

During November, in the robbery classification, 13 juvenile defendants were 12 years of age and under; nine were between 13 and 16 and one was between 16 and 18.

Children accused of tampering or taking property totaled 74. Of these, 36 were 12 years of age or under, 27 were between 13 and 16, and 11 were 16 to 18 years of age.

There were nine sex offenders. Seven were between 13 and 16 years of age. The other two were over 16.

Report Asks Firm Action On Perverts

Senate Unit Calls Them Security Peril; Urges Law Change

A Senate subcommittee yesterday recommended new and more drastic penalties against sex perverts here, and a more "realistic" effort to remove such persons from Federal jobs.

The recommendations were contained in a report of the special investigative committee of its six-month series of secret hearings on sex perversion in Government agencies.

The report also disclosed that the committee was told by an official of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that Russian agents are under instructions to secure details of private-life weaknesses of Government officials for use "at the appropriate time."

New Law Proposed

The Senators concluded that sex perverts are not suitable for Government positions; that they are poor security risks and "prime targets" for espionage agents, and that many Federal officials "have failed to take a realistic view" of the sex perversion problem.

The subcommittee proposed a new law for the District, providing maximum penalties of a $500 fine or six months' imprisonment, or both, for indecent exposure or the commission of "any other lewd, obscene or indecent act."

It criticized present operations of District sex laws, which permit perverts to "get away with paying $25 fines for disorderly conduct," and noted that until the committee began its investigation there was "poor liaison" between the police and the Civil Service Commission.

"Perverts . . . Retained"

"The lack of proper liaison between law enforcement agencies in the District of Columbia and departments of Government," the report stated, "has resulted in many known sex perverts being retained in Government jobs."

The committee singled out for particular criticism the State Department, charging that the agency "mishandled" 91 homosexual cases. These employes, the report noted, were allowed to resign for "personal reasons," with no record of their sex offenses included in their personnel record.

As a result of such action, the report stated, 23 of the 91 got jobs in other Goverment departments.

22 of 23 Fired

At present, it was disclosed, 22 of the 23 have since been removed from Federal employment, and the individual still retained in a new agency was kept on "after a reconsideration of the facts in his case."

The police department had estimated there are 3750 sex perverts holding Government jobs here, but the report said it is impossible to make any such determinations.

The report disclosed that the subcommittee check of Federal agencies found that since January 1, 1947, there were 4380 perversion cases brought to light in the Armed Services, and 574 in civilian Government agencies. Some 382 of the latter, however, were not uncovered until after last April 1, when the special investigation was begun.

The unanimous report of the subcommittee was signed by its members, which included Senators Hoey (D., N. C.), chairman; O'Conor (D., Md.), Eastland (D., Miss.), McClellan (D., Ark.), Mundt (R., S. D.), Smith (R., Maine), and Schoeppel (R., Kan.).

4 Firemen Hurt

Woman Dies In 2-Alarm House Fire

A 51-year-old woman died yesterday in a two-alarm fire at 3531 Holmead pl. nw. The victim was identified as Miss Mary Shipley. Four firemen were slightly injured.

Police said they were told that Miss Shipley had been led half the way down the stairs from the second floor by her mother, Lucy Henderson, 81, when she broke away and fled back to the second floor.

Firemen found her badly burned body on the second-floor rear porch. An autopsy will be performed today.

The fire apparently started about 1 p. m. in a partition next to an oven in the basement, police said, shortly after Francis Cooke, resident owner, left the house.

His wife, Anna, said she had been talking to her husband in the basement a few minutes before the fire started. She said she was sitting in the kitchen with Mrs. Henderson when she smelled smoke. She ran to the telephone to get aid and also shouted to Mrs. Henderson to take Miss Shipley outside.

Mrs. Cooke said the fire spread and she ran outside. She said she saw Mrs. Henderson and Miss Shipley coming down the steps. Then, she said, Miss Shipley ran back upstairs.

The fire gutted the house and spread to 3529 Holmead pl. DeWitt Harris, 27, who was at home there with his wife, said there was smoke and water damage to the roof and attic of his house.

The injured firemen are: Pvt. W. E. Thomas, burned hand; Pvt. Charles Fogle, smoke inhalation; Pvt. Curtis Royal, smoke inhalation, and Pvt. Steven Smarr, a cut hand.

Don't Be Late, Judge Advises Witnesses

Judge Armond W. Scott announced from the Municipal Court bench yesterday that witnesses henceforth will show up on schedule or he will send police around to arrest them.

Judge Scott's ire was aroused when he had to continue half a dozen cases because witnesses were absent.

"I will fill up the jails if necessary," he said, to make sure that court procedings are not hindered.

"Too many witnesses fail to show the proper respect," he said. "If they don't respect notice to appear, they don't respect the courts altogether."

From now on, if a witness does not appear, an attachment will issue, Judge Scott said. The witness will be arrested and must post $50 cash bail or $100 bond. If it isn't posted, the witness will be jailed until the trial, he said.

Belasco Transfer to D. C. As Canteen Sought

The District Commissioners yesterday asked the General Services Administration to turn Belasco Theater over to the District for use as a servicemen's canteen.

GSA has indicated such a proposal would be acceptable. The American Legion had been unsuccessful in its attempts to take over the Lafayette Park landmark because GSA felt is could not release the theater to one special group.

Two Men Die In Traffic Accidents

Both Victims Were Pedestrians, Struck in Rain; 2 Boys Injured

DISTRICT TRAFFIC TOLL:
1950 deaths to date.....67
1949 deaths to date.....66
Total 1949 death toll.....71

Two men were killed last night in separate traffic accidents in Washington and Alexandria during a rain storm.

Jesse L. Jackson, 60 of 4640 Benning rd. se., died at 9:30 p. m. at Gallinger Hospital, where he had been admitted three hours earlier with fractured legs and internal injuries.

Police said he was struck by a car, driven by Wallace L. Webster, 21 of 37 Florida ave. nw., while crossing the street near his home.

In Alexandria, Alvin Leigh Wynkoop, 51 of 1712 S. Nelson st., Arlington, a Gunther Brewing Co. truck driver, was killed instantly by a truck during the downpour.

Police said he ran out into the street in the 900 block of N. Henry st. about 7 p. m. and was struck by a florist's truck, driven by Everett Jewell, 16, of 308 E. Windsor ave., Alexandria.

Wynkoop died of head injuries, according to police. His body was removed to the Wheatley funeral home, 809 King st.

Earlier yesterday, two boys were critically injured. One was struck by a car in Washington and the other was hit by a truck in Arlington, Va.

On His Way Home

Admitted to Sibley Hospital with a fractured skull, fractured left leg and chest injuries was Edward B. Corn, 7, of 1016 Sigsbee pl. ne.

Police said he was on his way home from the Bunker Hill School about 12:30 p. m. when he was struck at 12th and Taylor sts. ne. The car was operated by Cornelius J. Sullivan, 21, of 1328 Randolph st. ne. Police said the boy apparently ran out into the path of the car from behind a tree.

Robert Saunders, 3, of 1922 N. Veitch st., Arlington, was admitted to Georgetown University Hospital with a fractured pelvis, possible skull fracture and cuts and bruises.

Hit by Trash Truck

The Saunders boy was hurt about 11:30 a. m. when he was struck by an Arlington County trash truck in an alley in the 1900 block of N. Vance st. The driver, Walter C. Davis, 27, of 3527 S. 24th st., Arlington, told police he did not know he had hit the boy until one of his helpers yelled to him.

In Washington, a pedestrian was struck by an Accident Investigation Unit car about 3:50 p. m. at 7th and F sts. nw. while it was responding to an accident at 7th and G sts. nw.

The pedestrian, Melvin Louis, 50, of 2700 Connecticut ave. nw., was admitted to Casualty Hospital. He was cut on the face and forehead.

The police car was driven by Pvt. John J. Bobinger, 30, of 5429 Tilden rd., Sunnybrook, Md., police said.

In the accident to which the police were going, George O. Rowe, 57, of 944 Virginia ave. sw., received head cuts when he was struck by a car. The driver was Robert G. Scriber, 18, of Leonardtown, Md., police said.

Klaher O. Osler, 29, a service manager at Call Carl Inc., 5949 Georgia ave. nw., suffered severe head cuts and a possbile skull fracture last night when the crank on a wrecking truck, which had brought in a damaged car, spun and struck him on the head. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital.

GOP Sheriff Declares War On County Vice

Prince Georges Aide Takes Office; Warns 'All Illegal Operators'

A crackdown on illegal liquor sales, gambling and "immoral" floor shows was promised in Prince Georges County yesterday by its new Republican sheriff.

Beall

Shortly after he took the oath of office in the Upper Marlboro circuit courtroom, Carlton G. Beall, who defeated Democratic incumbent T. Ward Martin in the November 7 elections, issued a "warning to all illegal operators."

Asserting that the sheriff's office is "legally responsible for all illegal practices in the county," Beall stated that in the past the office had been used "more or less as a process office . . ."

"This office will take the numbers writers off the streets," he said. "It will also see that delivery trucks do not pick up numbers for backers with headquarters elsewhere.

"Also all places selling alcoholic beverages will have to sell them according to the laws of this county," he stated. "The pinball machine operators shall stop using them for gambling devices. The immoral, so-called floor shows in night clubs and restaurants will be discontinued."

Earlier, Beall appeared before the county commissioners to inform them he had selected no deputies as yet. He said that the $4700 allotted him for running the sheriff's office was insufficient to hire the "essential qualified personnel necessary."

The commissioners assigned County Detectives John W. Siddall, 43, and Vincent S. Free, 37, as full-time special investigators to the sheriff and State's attorney.

In previous years a county policeman was assigned to the sheriff's office, but not to the State's attorney's.

Beall announced replacement of the three-man staff of jailers at the county jail. The appointees, the first Negroes to hold those posts, are Joseph Galloway of Nottingham, Frank Jackson, Marlboro, and Andrew J. Harrison, Fairmont Heights.

Cheverly Area Group Complains of Floods

A group of 30 residents of Tuxedo, Md., yesterday appealed to the Prince Georges County Commissioners to do something about flood conditions on 57th ave., just outside Cheverly, when it rains.

spread to Chicago on Wednesday, to Washington and St. Louis on Thursday, and yesterday to Pittsburgh, Dallas, Knoxville, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Battle Creek, Mich., Los Angeles, Peoria, Ill. and Boston.

The Justice Department on Wednesday and Thursday obtained anti-strike injunctions from Federal courts in Chicago, Washington, and Cleveland, not involved in the strike but which is headquarters of the union.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath indicated that soon after the Government acted to obtain contempt citations and fines against the strikers in the Chicago court, he would take similar action against the wildcatters via the courts here and in Cleveland, even though each of the strike injunctions is supposed to cover all union members all over the country.

W. P. Kennedy, president of the Trainmen's Brotherhood, has several times warned the union lodges that the strikes are unauthorized. Yesterday he ordered striking members of 22 Chicago union lodges to cease the work stoppage "forthwith."

"I cannot stress too strenuously the importance of complying with these instructions fully and quickly," Kennedy declared.

There was no indication, however, that Kennedy's instructions would be obeyed.

Locally, the 450 "sick" conductors, brakemen and switchers ignored union orders and continued to stay away from their switching and train reclassification jobs at Union Station and the Potomac Yards. One hundred firemen and engineers, who are members of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, also caught the walkout fever and called in "sick" at Union Station.

The wildcat strike here has virtually stopped all north-south traffic running through the vital switching center of the Potomac Yards, at Alexandria, where some 2500 freight cars are dead on the tracks. Around 250 freight cars, manned by emergency crews, managed to get through the yards yesterday. The yards hope to clear out 19 cars of perishables today.

The trainmen's strike is a protest against months of delay in granting a pay raise. The roads have offered a 40-hour week along with 23 cents an hour increase in pay; the union demand amounts to 31 cents.

$15,500 Damages Won by 2 in D. C. For Auto Injuries

A Federal Court jury in Baltimore yesterday awarded two Washington residents $15,500 damages for injuries they suffered in the head-on collision of two cars last February.

Miss Joan Ride, 20, of 3132 16th st. nw., who suffered head and back injuries, was awarded $10,000. Melvin A. Norwood, 24, of 2500 Q st. nw., who suffered head and arm injuries, was awarded $5500.

In addition, Miss Ride's father, Sidney Ride, was awarded $500 for her medical expenses.

The defendant was Robert P. Cook, a petty officer at the Patuxent Naval Air Base, Md. He was identified as the driver of the car which crashed into a car in which the District couple were riding on the Washington-Baltimore blvd. near Waterloo, Md.

Mail Carrier's Death On Cruiser a Suicide

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the death of Thomas F. Offutt, jr., 26, an Arlington Postoffice mail carrier.

Offutt was found shot to death Thursday afternoon in the galley of the 75-foot cabin cruiser, Tomelly, on which he lived with his parents. The boat is moored at the Wilson Line dock off Maine ave. between M and N sts. sw.

Ex-Policeman Gets 8 Years In Robbery

Convicted, With 3 Others, in $350 Safecracking Job

James O. Breeden, former Montgomery County police corporal who allegedly used his scout car to help in a safecracking, was sentenced yesterday to serve eight years in the Maryland Penitentiary.

Breeden, 33, and his three companions were tried before Judge Charles W. Woodward in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., on charges of housebreaking and larcency.

Breeden

They were charged with robbing the safe of the Devlin Lumber Co., 4822 Bethesda ave., Bethesda, of $350 the night of August 26.

One of the other men, Oliver W. Neville, 35, of 132 Wayne pl. se., was sentenced to three years in the Maryland House of Correction.

Another, Joseph A. Fabianich, 20, of 1410 Girard st. nw., received an indeterminate sentence not to exceed two years in the Maryland Reformatory for Males.

Sentence was deferred on the last of the defendants, Jack Albert Taylor, 30, of 104 Wooten ave., Bethesda, pending hearing of an additional character witness.

Breeden told the court Taylor broached the subject of his aid in robberies. He said Taylor told him he knew several "bigtime" safecrackers in New York and that they could make "big money" by cooperating. Breeden said he joined in the plot so that he could capture the safecrackers.

But Taylor told the court Breeden was the one who suggested they get together.

According to testimony, Taylor, Fabianich and Neville met Breeden after roll call at the police station. After sending them to Washington for burglar tools, Breeden took them in his squad car to the Devlin lumber yard where he said a window was open, they testified. After the robbery he took them to Taylor's taxicab, parked nearby, and they all returned to Washington, to an apartment in the Chastleton Hotel where they divided the money, each getting $85. They said they gave the extra $10 to "Tony," the girl whose apartment they used.

The trial was started before a jury. Breeden entered a plea of no defense. Fabianich and Neville pleaded innocent and Taylor pleaded guilty. In the course of the trial, Fabianich and Neville changed their plea to guilty, and the jury was dismissed.

Judge Woodward told Breeden that he had been "false to your trust," and that he had disgraced the Montgomery County Police Department. He pointed out that if Breeden's story were true, the three others could not have been convicted because they could have pleaded entrapment.

Breeden joined the county police force in July, 1941. From July, 1942, to October, 1945, he was in the Coast Guard. He was suspended at the time of his arrest September 1 and was dismissed from the force yesterday after he was found guilty. He is married and has two children.

Suburbs Put Under Mail Embargo to Relieve D. C.

Railway Express Extends Shipment Ban as Result of Trainmen's Strike

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Washington's mail embargo yesterday spread to six Maryland counties, four Virginia counties and Alexandria, Va., and the partial railway express embargo was made nearly absolute.

Assistant Postmaster General John M. Redding announced extension of the mail restrictions was needed to take further pressure off Washington, already bottlenecked by the rail strike. Most of the communities involved receive and dispatch their mail, including parcel post, through the Capital.

Redding said the wildcat rail strike over the country has halted "trains that move 90 percent of all Christmas mails." He estimated that mail deliveries are currently being delayed an average of five days by the walkout.

Maybe By Christmas

"If the work stoppage should end tomorrow—and we have no idea that it will—then we might deliver much of the Christmas mail by December 25," he said. "But if it doesn't end soon—your guess is as good as mine."

The District area restrictions went into effect at 3 p. m. in Anne Arundel, Howard, Prince Georges, Charles, St. Marys and Montgomery counties in Maryland; Arlington, Fairfax, Prince William and Loudoun counties in Virginia and Alexandria, Va.

Before the ban was clamped down by the postal authorities, parcel-post business became brisk at nearby postoffices and indications were that many stores were planning to bring in large truckloads at the close of the day. The Alexandria office had about 500 telephone inquiries, most of them from Washington stores.

Airmail Gets Load

As the city adjusted to the new mail situation, customers who found they could not mail heavy letters or packages shifted their patronage to air mail.

The Washington area ban was duplicated at Chicago and St. Louis as postal officials extended the restricted zones to keep the movement of mail away from the struck rail centers.

The mail embargo order, which went into effect as the Washington postal stations opened at 8 a. m. yesterday, helped harassed postal workers bite into their backlog by slowing down the rate at which it was piling up. It cut the usual volume 95 percent, Redding said.

By the end of the day, the situation was this: 11 carloads of parcel post were on the tracks waiting for outgoing trains, another 47 cars of mixed mail including parcel post were waiting to be unloaded and 34 cars were en route here.

During the afternoon, a special trainload containing 34 cars of mail arrived from New York City and was unloaded at the Benning yards. Truck vans then brought it to the Union Station.

First Class Mail Moves

Nationally, and in Washington, Redding reported movement of first-class mail was up-to-date.

The railway express ban was placed on shipments in and out of 15 States, the District and St. Louis because of the strike. States from which express cannot be moved are:

Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and Illinois.

Locally, the ban was placed on outbound shipments at 9 a. m. and by 2 p. m. railway express stations around the country stopped accepting shipments for the District, Frank E. Horning, superintendent for the local Railway Express Agency office said. Yesterday, the restriction applied only to perishable items.

Board Group Bids Business Office Direct Lunch Program

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A committee of the Board of Education yesterday recommended that the school system's business office take over local administration of the Federal school lunch and penny milk program.

The 2-to-1 vote by committee members was considered as a show of "no confidence" in the present direction of the program.

It now is administered by School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning through his executive assistant, Miss Margaret R. Pepper.

School Board Vice President Adelbert W. Lee, long-time critic of Dr. Corning, led an attack on the conduct of the program that resulted in the vote.

Joined by Dr. Johnson

Lee was joined by Dr. Phillip Johnson. Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, third member of the committee, voted to let Dr. Corning continue to direct the program "according to his administrative judgment."

The entire school board will consider three recommendations voted by the committee when it meets Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. in the Franklin Administration Building.

The first recommendation granted Dr. Corning permission to hire a trained storekeeper to run the program. The second called for a "complete appraisal" of the program by "one qualified." The third recommendation directed Dr. Corning to turn over the program to the business office.

Dr. Corning argued for the right to administer the program as he saw fit. He said it should continue "in the hands of educational officers" with certain phases designated to the business office.

"I am responsible for the program," Dr. Corning said. "I do not think you should rob the superintendent of the right to make use of the people he has."

Right to Speak Upheld

While speaking in defense of the present administration, Dr. Corning was interrupted by Lee who challenged the superintendent's right to speak at a committee meeting. A the request of other board members, Dr. Corning was heard.

The school head said the program has shown improvement since the schools took it over from the welfare department this year. Most of the complaints raised by Lee, he said, were based on incidents that happened before the schools were placed in charge.

Under the program, the school system, as an agent for the Agriculture Department, distributes surplus foods to more than 100 agencies and schools. An additional 127 schools receive grants for the purchase of milk available to students at 1-cent a bottle. Lee cited incidents of "mishandling of cases of canned cranberries, cheese and apples" in his criticism of the program.

He said the trouble arose from "educators trying to run a business."

Barber Wins Back Jail Trade After Judge Asks Rule Change

Bill Burrows is back in good standing at the Rockville jail.

Burrows is the Rockville barber who has been cutting the prisoners' hair for 30 years. At least, until last week, when the new jailer, A. C. Warming, refused to let him in to trim Lee Edwards, awaiting trial on a murder charge.

Warming had nothing against Burrows, he said. He just didn't believe it was good security to permit a barber in the jail with scissors.

James H. Pugh, attorney for Edwards, said he wanted his client to make a good appearance when he goes to trial next month and "not look like a hoodlum." County Manager Irving G. McNayr backed up the jailer.

Judge Stedman Prescott and the county manager had a little conference. "The judge advised me that he felt the barber should be permitted to enter," McNayr said. "The rule has been changed."

40-Acre NW Tract Sold By Glover Heirs for $1.2 Million

A $1,250,000 sale of more than 40 acres of land with frontage on Ward Circle nw., has just been completed.

The land was sold in two tracts by heirs of the late C. C. Glover, sr., first president of the Riggs National Bank, who bought it more than 60 years ago.

Purchaser of 19 acres in Westover for one million dollars was Preston E. Wire, District builder, who plans a substantial apartment development. His agent, Stewart Proctor, said start of the project will depend on the availability of materials and the war situation.

Purchaser of 22 acres of land north of Ward Circle for a reputed $250,000 was Leon Shainis, also a District builder. The land takes in part of the site of the WAVE barracks at Massachusetts and Nebraska aves. nw. It was understood Shainis will build about 130 houses on the tract.

Sergt. Edelen, D. C. Native, Tells of Terrible Toll Taken by Chinese Reds on His Outfit

205 Co. G Men Went Out but Only 20 Of Them Came Back

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Twenty came back. All others of Company's G's 205 men were killed or wounded by the Chinese Communists.

Although woven in defeat, this story of massacre in the valley, and on the hill is nonetheless fit to stand with the bravest in American history.

Company G's story was told yesterday by M/Sergt. Francis Edelen at Walter Reed Hospital.

Washington-born, 24-year-old Sergeant Edelen attended St. John's College High School and George Washington University. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David M. Edelen of Waldorf, Md. He fought in Italy in World War II and when the Korean war broke out gave up his accountant's job in San Francisco and returned to Washington to reenlist.

Platoon Sergeant in Korea

Very shortly he was a platoon sergeant with the Second Division in Korea and manning an M-1 instead of an adding machine.

November 25 found Company G, Twenty-third Infantry, in northwest Korea, 30 miles from the Manchurian border. The attack, part of the "end-the-war" offensive, began at 4 p. m. Company G was assigned to take a hill.

The Chinese counterfire was heavy from the beginning. Nevertheless, at 10 p. m. Edelsen had maneuvered his platoon to within 20 yards of the summit of the 1000-foot hill. His men were fixing bayonets for a final charge when the Chinese counterattacked—viciously, murderously and in strong numbers.

Later it was estimated that 1000 men were flung against Company G alone. Later Sergeant Edelen was to discover that all the company's officers except the company commander were either killed or wounded so that he was second in command.

2 Divisions Against Them

Later it was known that two Chinese divisions had been hurled against two American regiments.

But at the time Sergeant Edelen, believing himself only 20 yards from victory, knew only the hand grenades were rolling suddenly down the hill . . . killing some of his men, wounding some, splitting and isolating the others.

The sergeant found himself alone in the valley. Stumbling on, he came across an American tank with an unmanned machine gun. He corrected this condition and during the remainder of the night personnally reduced the crawling enemy horde by between 25 to 50 men.

The battle for the hill was over—and lost—at 7 a. m. Out of an original 205, Company G was able to muster 53 whole men. Where the "end-the-war" offensive had begun 15 hours earlier the valley now was filled with American wounded and dead.

It was on November 28 in 10-degree-below weather that the retreat began. Company G's small band was the last to pull out, guarding the rear while the others turned back.

Master Sergt. F. C. Edelen studies his Purple Heart

On that day Chinese mortar fire found a target in Sergeant Edelen. It was many days before he was to learn that of the 205 of Company G only 20 made the road back without being either killed or wounded.

He learned nothing for a while, for he was in a coma for four days. When he woke up in an Osaka Hospital he learned that he had been wounded in the neck and in three places in his left leg.

Then he looked down at his right leg, numb below the knee. Gangrene had set in, the doctors had to amputate.

Recreational Building Ban Easing Seen

Easing of restrictions to permit construction of public recreational facilities that will not use large quantities of critical materials was indicated yesterday by an official of the National Production Authority.

James W. Follin acting director of the construction controls division, told representatives of the District Recreation Department and the Board of Education to submit requests for projects that now fall under the NPA freeze order.

New construction of more than $5000 for recreation, amusement and entertainment projects was halted by the NPA in October. Since then the agency has been besieged with requests from public and nonprofit private recreational and educational agencies to relax the ban.

Local recreation and school officials met with Follin yesterday seeking permission for a new stadium at Coolidge High School improvements to the stadium at Eastern High School, field houses at Fort Stanton and Langdon Park playgrounds and other playground improvements.

The delegation included School Supt. Hobart M. Corning, School Board President C. Melvin Sharpe, Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender and Recreation Supt. Milo F. Christiansen.

They argued that public agencies spending public funds be allowed to add facilities that will develop physical fitness.

Follin said the order provides for exemptions and that public improvement projects will receive first consideration.

He said the Recreation Department can continue with its program of playground improvement but that the field houses must receive clearance. Since critical materials are not involved, he indicated they have a good chance for approval.

The agency now is looking into the possibility of easing restrictions to permit construction of gymnasium, he said. Stadium also may be included.

Follin said military requirements, however, probably will make it impossible for the school board to purchase needed construction materials for Coolidge and Eastern even if permission is granted.

Gichner Iron Works Gives $20,000 Bonus

Employes of the Fred S. Gichner Iron Works, Inc. will receive more than $20,000 as a Christmas bonus this year, according to Fred S. Gichner, president.

Gichner said the bonus, a profit-sharing plan, will be distributed to the 90 employes of the firm in the last pay envelopes before Christmas. Individual amounts will be determined by the employe's length of service and position in the firm but, Gichner continued, all employes will receive a portion of the bonus fund.

D. C. Told to Repay Tax On Dr. Rowe's Bequest

The House yesterday approved and sent to the White House a bill ordering District repayment of inheritance taxes paid by the Pan American Union on a bequest of nearly half a million dollars by the late Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the organization.

The Union paid a tax of $54,691.65 under protest. Final House action was acceptance of a Senate amendment specifying that the repayment was to be made by the District.

Capital Transit Asks Approval Of Stock Split

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday asked approval of its proposed 4-to-1 common stock split as a means of getting more business.

Capital Transit Comptroller J. E. Heberle put it this way to the District Public Utilities Commission which heard the company's application:

If the 260,000 shares outstanding are split into 960,000 shares, the number of stockholders should increase. This will mean more persons who would have a personal interest in the company, would use its facilities and would recommend them to friends.

The proposed split would not in itself throw more stock on the market, nor would it increase the total value of outstanding stock. It would merely give each present stockholder four shares for each one he now holds and reduce the value of each share accordingly. Par value is now $100 a share.

But Heberle said experience of other companies has been that a split means more trading and an eventual increase in the number of stockholders. In some cases the increase has been as much as 50 percent, he said.

In cross-examination of Heberle, PUC Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison sought to bring out that stock splits generally push up the stock's value—to the benefit of holders who may wish to sell.

The proposed stock split was tied up with another matter, and the PUC gave no decision yesterday on either.

The other question is what to do with a figure of $5,500,000 carried on Capital Transit's books as an unclassified asset. It is money that a predecessor of Capital Transit paid for property in excess of original cost. It was paid for good will or some other intangible property which the PUC will not allow to be reflected in the company's rate base. The company has kept the figure on its accounts. The PUC wants to get rid of it.

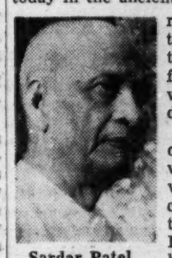
Sardar Patel Dead; All India Mourns

BOMBAY, India, Dec. 15 (U.P.). Sardar Vallabhbai Patel, 75, India's "Iron Man," was cremated today in the ancient Hindu burial rites as the nation mourned the man who fought for and won its freedom.



Sardar Patel

More than one million weeping men, women and children lined the road from Birla House, his home, to the cremation site where the final rites were performed for Patel who had died 10 hours earlier today of a heart attack.

The Bombay peasant's son was a disciple of Mohandas K. Gandhi who gave him the title "Sardar" which means leader. It was he who saw that Ghandi's orders were carried out in India's fight for independence.

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and other cabinet ministers flew here for the ceremony and wept with the hundreds of thousands at the cremation site as the flames consumed the body of the man they all loved and respected.

Patel officially was Deputy Prime Minister and Home Minister in the Indian government. Actually he was Nehru's adviser as well as partner in shaping the Indian nation after Gandhi's death. Nehru had turned to him many times for advice.

Patel was born October 31, 1875, in Gujerat Province. He studied law and set up a practice in Ahmedabad where in 1916 he met Gandhi. It was the turning point in his life. He gave up his practice, his cigarets, liquors and joined Gandhi's crusade.

He was a leader of the All-India Congress Party—the vehicle of Indian independence—and, like other anti-British agitators, spent years in prison, the last time from 1942 to 1945.

Agnes Repplier Dies; Noted As Essayist

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15 (AP).—Agnes Repplier, one of the most famous essayists of modern times, died today at her apartment in Overbrook. She was 92.

Miss Repplier

Most of Miss Repplier's work was in the form of literary papers based on books, but she was also interested in social problems and traveled extensively throughout the country lecturing at many schools and colleges.

Among her more famous works were "The Cat," "Counter Currents," "Points of Friction," "Books and Men" and "The Fireside Sphinx."

She was regarded by many critics as having no superior in her cleverness at setting forth the failings and foibles of the American people. Her work was characterized by a certain amused regret.

Throughout her writings, she revealed her strong Catholic faith. In 1911, she was honored with the Laetare medal given annually by Notre Dame University to the American Catholic whose efforts in a particular field of endeavor have achieved such distinction as reflects glory upon the Catholic Church.

'Great Books' Plan Backed Conditionally

The Rev. Harold C Gardiner, literary editor of the magazine America, las night expressed approval—with reservations—of the "Great Books" movement

Father Gardiner told the Charles Carroll Forum meeting in the Hotel Mayflower, if these cautions are kept in mind "you can participate in the Great Books movement and get some good from it."

His cautions were:

1. There is no such thing as an "intellectual get-rich-quick" method, and persons participating in the discussions sponsored by the Great Books Foundation of Chicago should not mistake a brief acquaintance with a masterpiece for familiarity. They should have "intellectual humility."

2 That Dr. Mortimer Adler, a founder of the movement, in a handbook since withdrawn, excluded the physical and spiritual aspects of man in expressing a conception of the nature of a liberal education. So some of the discussion leaders trained "got off on the wrong foot and you will find once in a while a discussion leader who is off base."

3. It is hard to find leaders who can "work a discussion into some progression and conclusion."

Father Gardiner is the editor of the four-volume "The Great Books, a Christian Appraisal."

Interfaith Service Set For Sunday

A unique uniting of ancient seasonal traditions will be unfolded Sunday at 4 p. m. interracial, interfaith worship service.

At the Bible-Way Church, a Negro church at 1130 New Jersey ave. nw., the service will combine the observance of the Christian Christmas and the Chanukkah, the age-old Jewish festival of lights

The Interracial Fellowship Choir, under the direction of Max Fax, will sing the music for both the Christmas and Chanukkah observances

Abraham Shefferman, executive secretary of the Adas Israel Congregation, will speak on "The Story of Chanukkah." The Rev. Smallwood Williams, pastor of the church, will preside. The event is sponsored by the Washington Fellowship.

No Rationing Of Gasoline Is Foreseen

By the United Press

Gasoline rationing will not be necessary under the present defense program, the Government said yesterday.

The reassurance for motorists, who feared an early return to "A" coupons, came from Deputy Petroleum Administrator Bruce K. Brown

He told a news conference that the armed forces currently are using less than 5 percent of the petroleum consumed in this country.

"There can be much more mobilization without straining present supplies," he said.

"I see no reason to assume that gasoline for automobiles will be in such short supply as to require rationing as the result of the shortages created by the mobilization program."

He made clear that he was speaking only in terms of a partial mobilization such as now planned. Rationing of gasoline and most other consumer goods would be a foregone necessity under total mobilization for all-out war.

Brown said that shortages of steel and other materials required for oil-well drilling equipment could, of course, cut into the supply of petroleum

"However," he said, "under presently existing mobilization conditions, I am quite hopeful that the well-drilling program can be fully supported with materials."

F-51 Crash in Va.; Pilots Feared Dead

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. Dec 15 (U.P.).—Two F-51 planes collided over the lower Virginia peninsula today and the Air Force listed both pilots as missing and presumed dead tonight

Air Force spokesmen said a search was being made for the pilots between the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay and the James River. The pilots were First Lieuts. Henry Shonenberg, 28, Baldwin, Long Island, and William Walterman, 26, Riverside, Tex.

A farmer, R. E. Van Arsdale, reported he saw one parachute open soon after the planes collided and one exploded. He lost sight of the chute as it approached the ground.

Wreckage believed that of one plane was found near Seaford, Va., about 10 miles from the site of the collision. Searchers found a yellow parachute on the bank of an inlet.

New Austrian Talks Collapse On First Day

LONDON, Dec. 15 (NYHT-). The Soviet Union today again blocked the conclusion of a peace treaty for Austria.

At a four-power meeting here for Foreign Minister's deputies, Georgi Zarubin, Soviet Ambassador at London, made it clear that Russia is still unwilling to sign a treaty.

This was the 258th meeting of the deputies since they began drafting an Austrian treaty in January, 1947. It lasted for 80 minutes and left matters deadlocked.

Auto Homicide Case Jury Fails To Reach Verdict

A mistrial was declared yesterday when a Municipal Court jury failed to agree on the guilt of Joseph M. Simcic, 21, of Detroit, charged with negligent homicide.

Simcic was accused with Alexander R. Miciotto, 43, of 3300 17th st. ne., after they were in a three-car collision last June which resulted in the death of Heston Simon, 25, of 216 R st. ne.

Miciotto has not yet been tried. Judge George D. Neilson set no date for the retrial of Simcic.

Andrews AF Base Soldier Charged In 4 Break-ins

A 19-year-old Andrews Air Force Base private was charged with four counts of housebreaking in Prince Georges County Police Court at Upper Marlboro yesterday.

Police said the soldier, Addison J. Sherwood of Syracuse, N. Y., is one of a group of three Andrews G. I.s involved in a series of housebreakings and robberies in Washington and Prince Georges County since last May.

The other two were arrested by Washington police last week and held for the grand jury. Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie ordered Sherwood held for the grand jury and set bond at $500 on each of the four counts.

Prosecution Asks Court to Revoke Bail of Alger Hiss

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (AP).—The Government asked an appeals court today to revoke the $10,000 bail of Alger Hiss, 46, former high State Department official convicted of perjury.

The prosecution also asked that Hiss be denied a stay of a mandate ordering him to prison to begin his five-year term.

Hiss has been free in bail since a Federal jury convicted him last January 21 of lying when he denied he slipped secret State Department documents to Whittaker Chambers, former courier for a Soviet spy ring.

The United States Court of Appeals unanimously upheld the conviction last Thursday. Hiss then applied for a continuance in bail pending his appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Clarke S. Ryan, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, opposed the defense plea in a memorandum filed with the United States Court of Appeals.

Land Seizures Launch Drive By Italy's Reds

ROME, Dec. 15 (U.P.).—Italy's Communists opened a long-threatened winter campaign against the government today with land seizures and demonstrations in northern, central and southern Italy and Sardinia.

Today's activities were in pursuit of land for peasants, work for the unemployed and higher wages.

Tomorrow the Reds will open a nation-wide campaign against rearmament with a gigantic "march of solidarity" on Venice.

Unemployed persons in the Po River valley in the north seized more than 1000 acres of land near Ferrara and divided it into plots and immediately started tilling it.

In the Forli area of the north unemployed persons of Meldola, Galatea and Cesenatico launched "strikes in reverse" by starting "unsolicited work" on various public works projects for which they demand government appropriations.

At Ferrara, also in the north, about 7000 workers demonstrated against "government neglect in promoting public aid and reconstruction."

Russians Again Demand Hirohito Be Put on Trial

MOSCOW (Saturday) Dec. 16 (AP).—The Soviet government tonight demanded an answer from the United States and Britain to its note of February 1 proposing that Japanese Emperior Hirohito be tried by a military court on charges that he planned germ warfare in World War II.

(The United States sharply rejected the Soviet note last February, calling it a smokescreen to cover Soviet failure to "repartriate or otherwise explain the fate of over 370,000 Japanese prisoners detained in Soviet-held territory.")

The Soviet note repeated charges that the Japanese used germ weapons against the Mongolian People's Republic and the Soviet Union in 1939. It said epidemics of typhus and plague were started against China from 1940 to 1942.

The Soviet demand was made in a note delivered yesterday to the American and British governments by the Soviet embassies in Washington and London.

The note announced that the (Communist) Chinese People's Government has joined the Soviet Union in the demand for the trial of Hirohito.

Gold Saves 141 Days On 30-Year Sentence

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15 (AP).—Harry Gold, atomic spy courier today had his 30-year prison sentence reduced to 29 years and 223 days.

United States District Judge James P. McGranery reduced Gold's sentence to include the time already spent in jail by the Philadelphia chemist. Gold had spent 142 days in jail since his arrest May 23.

McGranery acted on the request of Gold's court appointed counsel, John D. M. Hamilton.

Gold was taken from Holmesburg prison today to the Tombs prison in New York to be available at the New York trial next week of Irving Greenglass, who is charged with being a member of the atom spy ring.

Coast Guard Widens Ages for Enlistment

The Coast Guard yesterday eased requirements for enlistment in its organized reserve in order to speed up formation of units engaged in port security training.

It widened the age range to 17 through 35 and said no prior military service will be required. Formerly, at least one year's military service had been required.

Coast Guard said it will give preference to candidates whose civilian occupations and experiences in port security duties will enable them to qualify quickly for petty officer ratings.

FBI Seizes Another 'Most Wanted' Man

The FBI announced yesterday that Morris Guralnick, among the nation's "10 most wanted criminals," was arrested tonight at Madison, Wis.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced that Guralnick, was wanted for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for the crime of aggravated assault at Kingston, N. Y.

He was arrested by the FBI and Madison police.

Keyserling Held Misquoted On Price Curb Opposition

A report that Leon Keyserling, chief of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, opposed price controls in a telephone conversation with Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, was denied last night.

Keyserling's office called the report, carried in an Associated Press dispatch from Dallas where the AFBF was in session, "nonsense."

The dispatch quoted Kline as telling the convention that he talked with Keyserling on the telephone and that the latter expressed "100 percent agreement with the bureau's price-control stand."

The bureau had voted that price controls at this time would be a "tragic error."

"Members of the Council of Economic Advisers do not tell members of their advisory committee what they are going to tell the President," a spokesman for Keyserling said, pointing out that Kline is a member of the Agricultural Advisory Committee to the Council.

"Neither do they make announcements as to what the President is going to do," he added. "Obviously there was a total misunderstanding by Mr. Kline as to Mr. Keyserling's conversation about the need for controls."

A Dual Treat Is in Store For New Yorkers Tonight

By Nicha Searle

GET OUT YOUR BEST dance frock and party manners for the State societies' calendar is chockfull of holiday dances and parties!

First on the list is the New York dance tonight which will be a double celebration. The New Yorkers will celebrate New York Day of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission and a Yuletide party as well.

The dance is at the Shoreham Hotel, from 9:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. Special guests will be the members of the Federal Security Agency.

The official scroll of the National Commission is to be presented to a member of the New York commission and accepted in behalf of Governor Dewey.

Another honored guest is expected—you've guessed it—Santa Claus.

The DELAWARE State Society will hold their Christmas party on December 18 in the Women's City Club, 1733 I st. nw., at 8 p. m.

Santa is to be there, with Martha Madison and her accordion providing entertainment. Of course, there will be refreshments.

The society must have something up its sleeve since it is asking each person to bring a small gift — practical or nonsensical — not costing over 50 cents.

THEN THERE'S the Illinois State Society Christmas dance on the Saturday night before Christmas.

A word of advice from the society: after the last gift is wrapped and set under the tree and the last-minute card is written, get out your tux and formal and gown and have fun with the Illinoisans!

The party will be held in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. December 23, with music by Dave McWilliams and his orchestra.

IN THE PENNSYLVANIA State Society's datebook, it will be a holiday dance between Christmas and New Year dates.

December 29, the Keystone Staters will dance in the west ballroom of the Shoreham at 10 p. m. Dave McWilliams' orchestra will play, and the traditional Paul Jones will help everyone to get acquainted.

The receiving line will include members of the executive board. For further information concerning the dance or the society, call Mrs. Algia A. Martin at OTis 7455 or Mrs. Ray J. Whitney at GLebe 2629.

Grace Learns:

'Feeding Face' Beneficial to 'Hungry' Skin

By Ann Lawrence

(Third day of Grace's beauty program.)

"FEEDING YOUR FACE" is not as much of a slang expression as it may seem. We're talking about food that goes into your skin. Not all of us can afford salon treatments to help keep us young-looking and beautiful but there isn't a woman, no mater how busy she is, who can afford not to treat her face to nourishing creams, blood circulation massages and refreshing astringents.

The younger a woman is when she starts, the more control she will have over age. Certainly when she reaches thirty-five, she must spend at least one session a week on her face and neck—either in a salon or at home.

Grace will not be able to go to a salon every week, but she learned there how to take care of her skin and she will go on doing it. First, there is cleansing cream to remove all traces of dust and dirt. It is applied, as are all other creams, with an up movement, working up and around the eyes, very gently around the neck.

THE NEXT step is to tissue off the excess and mask your face and neck with cotton pads soaked in ice water and mild skin lotion. If you can lie down for just a minute at this point, so much the better.

Grace was then treated with a stimulating oil on her neck and an astringent oil on her face. Both are rich and soothing and again are applied with up movements. Leaving both these on, neck cream was massaged in, followed by a rich tissue cream, because Grace's skin is a little dry. Oily skin would take a mild tissue cream. Eye cream goes on next and this is very gently worked in all around the eyes, lifting the skin but without force. The forehead is not overlooked either.

YOU WILL note that all the creams (except cleansing) have been left on, each one given a chance to be absorbed by the hungry skin.

The treatment at the salon includes a very special operation called the Galvanic Treatment. This is electric current lightly passed over all portions of the face and neck. Plus being a pleasant tingling sensation that is relaxing as well as being a good blood circularizer, it helps close large pores.

Tomorrow: Canny Camouflage.

Group Decisions Build Stability

This is the last in a series of six articles on the factors promoting successful family living. It is reprinted with permission from The Annals of The American Academy of Political and Social Science for November 1950.

By James H. S. Bossard
Eleanor S. Boll and Winogene P. Sanger

THE FAMILY council, as a more or less formalized meeting of a family group and with regulatory powers over its members, seems to be as old as the human family.

In primitive societies, and in the earlier stages of civil society, its organization was more formal and its powers were more prescribed. It had a relatively high status among various immigrant groups coming to this country, and particularly so among the French who settled in Louisiana.

In contemporary times, with the prevalence of smaller family groups and with the greater role of public agencies in family matters, a more simplified and informal type has come to prevail.

IN TERMS OF formalized definition, then, the modern family council may be regarded as a gathering of the family group to discuss matters of common family interest, to advise, deliberate, and if possible agree. Its basic implications are that the family is a unified group of interesting personalities, in which each member has his rights, roles and responsibilities.

Occasionally one hears of modern family councils which are organized on a more pretentious basis, with a definite time, place, and procedure, with rules and regulations. Father may be the presiding officer, there is a secretary to keep a record of the proceedings; decisions are made formally by majority vote.

More and more, however, the contemporary family council dispenses with formalities of this kind and becomes an informal gettogether of the family group for joint discussion of its common problems.

THERE ARE at least five reasons for a growing emphasis on the family council and its role in the promotion of stability in the contemporary American family. First is the decline in the size of the family, thus permitting greater ease in family conference and fuller voice to all its members, with particular reference to the younger ones.

Second is the growing isolation of the immediate family, which elimnates the interference of relatives. Next is the decline of parental authority, particularly the domination of the father, and the rise of the democratic idea as applied to family group living.

Fourth is the growing diversification in interests and occupations of the family members, which makes for increased richness, variety, and at times conflicts in the family background. Finally, one needs to recall here the growing emphasis in family life upon the personality development of its members, particularly its child members.

BASED ON current uses of the family council, certain tentative conclusions concerning its values are stated here in summary form.

1. It may serve to acquaint all members of the group with the family's needs and problems. Personal problems are merged into a group problem, and each may see his or her problems and needs both in relation to those of each other member and also in relation to those of the group as a whole.

2. Wiser decisions are possible because all members can present pertinent information and particular interests.

3. There is the important fact that group decisions tend to be supported by group authority. The authority of the group is more acceptable than the authority of just a single member.

4. Emotionally, perhaps the most significant value inherent in the family council idea is the sense of security which it may give to the individual family member. Here is not just a family into which he is born and in which he must remain, subject to regiment and complete conformity. This is his family, in which he has his say and in which he co-operates in doing his part. The successful family council involves a strong "we feeling," a sense of belonging, of oneness and unity with the family.

Conclusion

THE GENERAL assumption underlying these articles is that stable and successful family living is something that must be achieved. It does not come by accident, inheritance, legislative fiat, priestly blessing, or as a result of the ordering and forbidding technique. It is not the creation of university lectures or sermons from pulpits or denouncements in the daily press.

From these and other agencies may come counsel and guidance, inspiration and suggestion, but at best these are but threads which each family can weave into a large fabric as the loom of its daily life shuttles back and forth in the continuing give and take of group living.

Victorians Cheer Industrial Home Annex Children

The Victorians, local women's social and civic organization, were responsible for the bright faces of 31 youngsters from the Industrial Home Annex last Saturday.

The women outfitted the children with shoes in a local department store. The salespeople, touched by the happiness in the children's eyes took up a collection and bought them ice cream and candy.

Money for the shoes was raised by the Victorians at an October cocktail party. During the year the Victorians have installed shelves at the home for the children to keep their toys in neat arrangement, have hung drapes and have provided mounted cut-out pictures to brighten the rooms of the institution.

The majority of the members are Government employes. President of the group is Miss Susie Moore.

Yuletide Sales Under Record '49 Pace Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Christmas shopping in Washington is lagging behind last year's record pace, figures from the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond indicated last night.

For the week ended December 9, downtown department stores showed a sales dip of 3 percent as compared with the corresponding period last year. Taking into account the generally higher level of prices this year, the decline in unit volume probably is more pronounced.

For the four weeks ended December 9 local store sales also displayed a 3 percent decline from the same 1949 period.

Nationally, department store sales for the latest week increased 2 percent over the like period last year, the Federal Reserve Board reported. Five of the 12 Federal Reserve Districts nowever, reported lower sales.

Here are the detailed sales figures by districts:

	Dec. 9 Week	4-Week Period
Boston	—5%	—2%
New York	+2	....
Cleveland	+8	—8
Philadelphia	+2	+2
Richmond	—2	—2
Atlanta	+7	+6
Chicago	+2	+5
St. Louis	—5	+1
Minneapolis	—4	+2
Kansas City	—1	+4

FEWER TAKERS The Treasury reported yesterday it found takers for only about 86 percent of an $8,008,101,500 exchange offering of 1¾ per cent, five-year notes to be dated October 15. Ordinarily, the Treasury has takers for about 94 percent of the new securities it issues in exchange for maturing securities. The new issue was offered in exchange for $2,635,433,500 in 1½ percent, 5½-year bonds and $5,372,668,000 in 1⅛ percent, one-year certificates maturing January 1.

NAMED TO BOARD: Dr. E. Milburn Colvin, jr., has been elected a director of Jefferson Savings and Loan Association, President Fred A. Smith announced yesterday. Dr Colvin fills the vacancy left by the death of his father, Ernest Colvin. Active in affairs of the District of Columbia Dental Society, Dr. Colvin is also president of the Timberlake Farm Equipment Co. of Warrenton, Va. He is a native of Washington and a graduate of the University of Maryland Dental School.

Dr. Colvin

NEW OFFICERS. Howard C. Clayton of Pennsylvania Railroad has been elected president of the Washington Passenger Association. Other new officers are: Frederick S. Lemley, first vice president; Charles G. Dankmyer second vice president; Raymond T. Schlude, secretary-treasurer. Elected to the executive committee were J. B. Cunningham, E. W. Hase and M. J. Ruane.

ODD LOTS. House & Herrmann, furniture firm, and Bates Jewelers are paying Christmas bonuses to employes, ranging from one to two weeks extra wages . . . Suburban National Bank will pay the regular 6 percent dividend on December 31 to stock of record December 20 . . . Washington area Dodge dealers will attend a preview Monday of the 1951 Dodge models in Atlantic City . . . Newsprint consumption this year is expected to reach a new high of 5,700,000 tons, topping last year's record of 5,517,000 tons by nearly 4 percent.

EXTRA DIVIDEND. Directors of the Industrial Bank of Washington have declared an extra dividend of 2 percent in addition to the regular annual 6 percent dividend, payable January 23 to stock of record December 31. This is the largest dividend disbursement ever to be made by the institution, according to Vice President B. D. Mitchell. The board also authorized the transfer of $20,000 from undivided profits to surplus, bringing the latter account to $220,000. A bonus also was authorized for employes, based on length of service.

LABORATORY SOLD: The purchase of Airborne Instruments Laboratory of Mineola, N. Y., from Aeronautical Radio Inc., of Washington, was announced yesterday. The purchasers were a group of executives and employes of the laboratory, in association with Laurance S. Rockefeller and certain of his associates, and with American Research & Development Corp. of Boston. The group purchased the entire capital stock of the laboratory. The laboratory was organized in 1945 for research and development purposes as an outgrowth of three World War II laboratories associated with Columbia and Harvard Universities and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The scheduled airlines of the country own Aeronautical Radio, which held the laboratory's stock.

The World's Greatest Christmas Stories

'Which of the Nine?"

This is the sixth of a two-week series of selections from The World's Greatest Christmas Stories, a new anthology edited by Eric Posselt.

Today's story is by Maurus Jokai (1825-1904), Hungarian novelist, who took time from a legal career to write many works in the proscribed Magyar language, which he sought to restore after the fall of the Hapsburg dynasty. The translation is by Monique Jean.

By Maurus Jokai

ONCE upon a time in the city of Budapest there lived a poor shoemaker who simply couldn't make ends meet. Not because people had suddenly decided to give up wearing boots, nor because the city council had passed an ordinance directing that shoes be sold at half price, nor even because his work was not satisfactory.

Indeed, the good man did such excellent work that his customers actually complained that they couldn't wear out anything he had once sewed together. He had plenty of customers who paid him promptly and well enough; not one of them had run away without settling his bill. And yet Cobbler John couldn't make both ends meet.

The reason was that the good Lord had blessed him all too plentifully with nine children, all of them as healthy as acorns.

Then, one day, as if Cobbler John hadn't already had trouble enough, his wife died. Cobbler John was left alone in this world with nine children. Two or three of them were going to school; one or two were being tutored; one had to be carried around; gruel had to be cooked for the next; another had to be fed, the next one dressed, yet another washed. And on top of all this he had to earn a living for all of them.

When shoes were made for them, nine had to be made all at once; when bread was sliced, nine slices had to be cut all at one time. When beds were made ready, the entire room between window and door became one single bed, full of little and big, blond and brunette heads.

"Oh my dear Lord God, how Thou hast blessed me," the good artisan often sighed, while even after midnight he still worked and hammered away at his lasts in order to feed the bodies of so many souls, stopping occasionally to chide now one, now another tossing restlessly in a dream.

Nine they were—a round number nine. But thanks be to the Lord, there was still no cause for complaint, because all nine were healthy, obedient, beautiful and well-behaved, blessed with sound bodies and stomachs. And rather should there be nine pieces of bread than one bottle of medicine; rather nine side by side than coffins between them. But none of Cobbler John's children had the slightest intention of dying. It was already fated that all nine of them should fight their way through life and not yield their places to anybody.

ON Christmas Eve, Cobbler John returned late from his many errands. He had delivered all sorts of finished work and had collected a little money which he had to use to buy supplies and to pay for their daily needs. Hurrying homeward, he saw stands on every street corner, loaded with gold and silver lambs and candy dolls which pushcart women were selling as gifts for well-behaved children.

Cobbler John stopped before one or two of the carts . . . Maybe he ought to buy something . . . What? For all nine? That would cost too much. Then for just one? And make the others envious? No, he'd give them another kind of Christmas present; a beautiful and good one, one that would neither break nor wear out, and which all could enjoy together and not take away from each other.

"Well, children; One, two, three, four . . . are you all here?" he said when he arrived home within the circle of his family of nine. "Do you know that this is Christmas Eve? A holiday, a very gay holiday. Tonight we do not work, we just rejoice!"

The children were so happy to hear that they were supposed to rejoice that they almost tore down the house.

"Wait now! Let's see if I can't teach you that beautiful song I know. It's a very beautiful song. I have saved it to give it to you all as a Christmas present."

The little ones crawled noisily into their father's lap and up on his shoulders, and waited eagerly to hear the lovely song.

"Now what did I tell you? If you are good children . . . just stand nicely in line! . . . there . . . the bigger ones over here and the smaller ones next to them." He stood them in a row like organ pipes, letting the two smallest ones stay on his lap.

"And now—silence! First I'll sing it through, then you join in." Taking off his green cap and assuming a serious, pious expression, Cobbler John began to sing the beautiful melody: "On the blessed birth of Our Lord Jesus Christ . . ."

The bigger boys and girls learned it after one rendition, though the smaller ones found it a bit more difficult. They were always off key and out of rhythm. But after a while they all knew it. And there could be no more joyous sound than when all nine thin little voices sang together that glorious song of the angels on that memorable night. Perhaps the angels were still singing it when the melodious voices of nine innocent souls prayed for an echo from above. For surely there is gladness in heaven over the song of children.

BUT there was less gladness immediately above them. There, a bachelor was living all by himself in nine rooms. In one he sat, in the other one he slept, in the third he smoked his pipe, in the fourth he dined, and who knows what he did in all the others? This man had neither wife nor children but more money than he could count. Sitting in room number eight that night, this rich man was wondering why life had lost its taste. Why did his soft spring bed give him no peaceful dreams?

Then, from Cobbler John's room below, at first faintly but with ever-increasing strength, came the strains of a joy-inspiring song. At first he tried not to listen, thinking they would soon stop. But when they started all over for the tenth time, he could stand it no longer. Crushing out his expensive cigar, he went down in his dressing gown to the shoemaker's flat.

They had just come to the end of the verse when he walked in. Cobbler John respectfully got up from his three-legged stool and greeted the great gentleman.

"You are John, the cobbler, aren't you?" the rich man asked.

"That I am, and at your service, Your Excellency. Do you wish to order a pair of patent leather boots?"

"That isn't why I came. How very many children you have!"

"Indeed, I have, Your Excellency—little ones and big ones. Quite a few mouths to feed!"

"And many more mouths when they sing! Look here, Master John—I'd like to do you a favor. Give me one of your children. I'll adopt him, educate him as my own son, take him traveling abroad with me, and make him into a gentleman. One day he'll be able to help the rest of you."

Cobbler John stared wide-eyed when he heard this. These were big words—to have one of his children made into a gentleman! Who wouldn't be taken by such a idea? Why, of course, he'd let him have one! What great good fortune! How could he refuse?

"WELL, then, pick out one of them quickly, and let's get it over with," said the gentleman. Cobbler John started to choose.

"This one here is Alex. No, hm I couldn't let go. He is a good student and I want him to become a priest. The next one? That's a girl, and, of course, Your Excellency doesn't want a girl. Little Ferenc? He already helps me with my work. I couldn't do without him. Johnny? There, there—he is named after me. I couldn't very well give him away!

"Joseph? He is the image of his mother—it's as if I saw her every time I look at him. This place wouldn't be the same without him. And the next is another girl—she wouldn't do. Then comes little Paul: he was his mother's favorite. Oh, my poor darling would turn in her grave if I gave him away. And the last two are too small—they'd be too much trouble for Your Excellency . . ."

He had reached the end of the line without being able to choose. Now he started all over; this time beginning with the youngest and ending with the oldest. But the result was still the same: he couldn't decide which one to give away because one was as dear to him as the other and he would miss them all.

"Come, my little ones—you do the choosing," he finally said. "Which one of you wants to go away to become a gentleman and travel in style? Come now, speak up! Who wants to go?"

The poor shoemaker was on the verge of tears as he asked them. But while he was encouraging them, the children slowly slipped behind their father's back, each taking hold of him, his hand, his leg, his coat, his leather apron, all hanging on to him, and hiding from the great gentleman. Finally Cobbler John couldn't control himself any longer. He knelt down, gathered them all into his arms and let his tears fall on their heads as they cried with him.

"It can't be done, Your Excellency! It can't be done. Ask of me anything in the world, but I can't give you a single one of my children so long as the Lord God has given them to me."

The rich gentleman said that he understood, but that the shoemaker should do at least one thing for him: would he and his children please not sing any more? And for this sacrifice he asked Cobbler John to accept one thousand florins.

Master John had never even heard the words, "One thousand florins," spoken, never in all his life. Now he felt the money being pressed into his hand.

HIS EXCELLENCY went back to his room and his boredom. And Cobbler John stood staring incredulously at the oddy shaped banknote. Then he fearfully locked it away in the wooden chest, put the key into his pocket and was silent. The little ones were silent, too. Singing was forbidden. The older children slumped moodily in their chairs, quieting the smaller ones by telling them they weren't allowed to sing any more because it disturbed the fine gentleman upstairs. Cobbler John himself was silently walking up and down. Impatiently he pushed aside little Paul, the one who had been his wife's favorite, when the boy asked that he be taught again that beautiful song because he had already forgotten how it went.

"We aren't allowed to sing any more!"

Then he set down angrily at his bench and bent intently over his work. He cut and hammered and sewed until suddenly he caught himself humming: "On the blessed birth of Our Lord Jesus Christ . . " He clapped his hand over his mouth. But then all at once he was very angry. He banged the hammer down on the work bench, kicked his stool from under him, opened the chest, took out the thousand-florin bill and ran up the stairs to His Excellency's apartment.

"Good, kind Excellency, I am your most humble servant. Please take back your money. Let it not be mine, but let us sing whenever we please, because to me and my children that is worth much more than a thousand florins."

With that he put the bill down on the table and rushed beathlessly back to his waiting family. He kissed them one after the other; and lining them up in a row just like organ pipes, he sat himself down on his low stool, and together they began to sing again with heart and soul: "On the blessed birth of Our Lord Jesus Christ. . . ." They couldn't have been happier if they had owned the whole of the great big house.

But the one who owned the house was pacing through his nine rooms, asking himself how it was that those people down below could be so happy and full of joy in such a tiresome, boring world as this!

Marijuana Raids Net 25, Including Teen-Age Girls

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 15 (AP)—Police arrested 25 persons today after a series of raids of marijuana parties at which, Lieut. Ray Huber said, "some of the juvenile-age girls had their boy friends names tattooed on inimate parts of their bodies.

Huber said 15 of those arrested were adult men and 10 juveniles, five of them girls. The raids were conducted in the nearby Norwalk and Bellflower districts, where parents and school authorities complained that parties were being held and the revelers used marijuana or heroin. The parties often were held in homes while the juveniles' parents were away.

Hickman Prefers To Be in Rhythm

By John Crosby

HERMAN HICKMAN, the most corpulent literate anywhere in the east, turned professional the other night and took the Yale football team along with him. Hickman, as I suppose everyone knows, is a poetaster, after-dinner speaker, wit, "Cigar Smoker of 1950" (by unanimous vote of the cigar industry), television star and head coach of the Yale football team—to quote just a handful of his titles, not necessarily in the order of their importance.

Crosby

Last Sunday on his TV show "Celebrity Time," of which he is a permanent panel member, Hickman fell prey to sordid commerce. The announcer was plugging the sponsor's product, Goodrich tires, and Hickman was somehow lured into this exchange. The announcer displayed an ordinary or non-Goodrich tire, hideous object. "Out of rhythm," he declared.

Hickman agreed—all 300 pounds of him—that being out of rhythm was a terrible thing and proceeded to show movie films of a horribly out-of-rhythm Yale play in which a Yale back was smeared behind the line of scrimmage. Then he showed films of another, more successful Yale play. "This one goes for a touchdown," he declared jovially, "Because it's in rhythm."

The announcer took over from there to explain that all Goodrich tires were rhythmic as dactyls; all other tires as uncadenced as hailstones on a tin roof.

WELL, HERMAN HICKMAN has done a lot of things that have delighted and astonished the Elis. This last venture may succeed only in astonishing them. It's the first time in my memory that a Yale team has been used to further the sales of any sort of commercial product, leastwise a tire.

Apart from this brief scuffle with a commercial—he's only done it once—the Yale coach has been quite an asset to "Celebrity Time" (CBS-WTOP-TV 10 p. m. Sundays), a better than average quiz show. Hickman is filled with erudition on rather unlikely subjects—poetry, music, literature, old-time vaudeville, old-time songs—and loftily ignorant about the theater and especially movies.

Naturally, he pretty hep on football, too, but he has missed questions on that subject. His most humiliating defeat on the subject of football was in front of Lou Little, the Columbia coach, a guest that night. Yale beat Columbia handily on the football field this year but that's small recompense for a fluff on a quiz show.

AMONG SPORTSWRITERS, Hickman is a contemporary Falstaff—rotund, boisterous, sharp-witted. Television subdues him. For one thing, he's thrown up against a lot of actors who are extremely adroit at stealing the center of the stage, the camera and the microphone, given half a chance.

The scoring is different than up at Yale, too. Last Sunday Hickman and his guest sidekick, Ken Murray, whaled the tar out of the opposition quiz team—Kyle MacDonnell and Nancy Kelly. The emcee, Conrad Nagel, proclaimed the match a tie. How he arrived at such a decision I couldn't say.

Just keep the Yale football team out of the commercials though, Herman. No such sacred subject has been profaned by commercialism since the 19th century when a genius of an advertising man worked a singing commercial into English hymnals.

Congregations, just before Christmas, found themselves singing:

"Hark the herald angels sing
"Beecham's pills are just the thing.
"Peace on earth and mercy mild.
"Two for adult, one for child."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

In This Case 'No' Means 'Positively'

"My husband is a cab driver," writes Mrs. A. E. Marlowe of 610 Shoreham bldg. "He claims that there's a rule that a hacker may not stop to pick up passengers where there is a streetcar platform and just one lane for traffic.

"Inasmuch as many people hail cabs at such places, please check the law and let us know what it says."

The Hack Inspector's office says Hacker Marlowe is absolutely right. No vehicle—public or private—is permitted to stop to pick up or discharge passengers between a loading platform and the adjoining curb, regardless of how many traffic lanes there are.

I know it's done every day, but it's not legal. My personal guess is that many motorists think it's okay because they see trucks load and unload for long periods in these places, and I suppose they figure that if a truck can block a lane of traffic it won't hurt much if a passenger car also pauses there momentarily.

The fact of that matter is that trucks are governed by an entirely different set of "standing" regulations, which bar them during rush hours but permit deliveries to be made at other times.

OH, THAT'S DIFFERENT

Here's a bright story told at a recent Argo Lodge meeting by A. B. Kapplin, director of Americanism and War Services for B'nai B'rith.

After the first World War, Kapplin was helping finance officers at a discharge center. It was his job to calculate mileage allowances so that doughboys could be paid their railroad fare back home.

All went well until one lad said he was from Milton, Ga., and Kapplin couldn't find the town on his map. "What big city is it near?" he asked.

"Well, it ain't too far from Macon," the soldier replied.

Kapplin found Macon all right, but no nearby city named Milton. He called the colonel, and the colonel couldn't find it either.

"I'm sorry, buddy," Kapplin finally said. "We just don't seem to be able to locate the place."

"That's funny," mused the soldier. "You guys didn't seem to have any trouble finding it when you drafted me."

MISCELLANY

When the Winter Haven (Fla.) Community Players put on "Born Yesterday," they thought they'd have trouble getting copies of The Washington Post for "Billie Dawn" to mark up, but they were fooled. The papers were supplied by Gordon Hubbel, who used to be in radio here and taught at American University. Wife Miriam Hubbel writes that when they moved to Winter Haven they couldn't leave town without first arranging for a mail edition of The Post to follow them . . . Joan Hicks of 2113 S. Quebec st., Arlington, Va., sends along another check that will brighten somebody's Christmas. It's now en route to The Community Chest Federation, 1101 M st. nw., Washington 5, D. C. . . . Invalidated streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital have been received from Mrs. John A. Kershaw, 3819 Milan dr., Alexandria, Va.; Frank A. Harris, 417 1st st. sw.; and Philip and Zelda Janus, 7103 Braeburn pl. Bethesda, Md. . . . The Damon Runyon Cancer Fund is $2.20 richer as the result of a puppet show engineered by two 8-year-olds, Larry Bennett and Gerald Friedman, of 6713 and 6735 13th pl. nw. . . . Mrs. M. Dorothy Baker of 60 Randolph pl. nw., says all she wants for Christmas is her right to vote . . . Mrs. Retta W. Dillon of 900 Longfellow st. nw., suggests that the "splendid delivery service and courteous collection routine" of Washington Post Carrier Boy Billy Little, 934 Longfellow st. nw., deserves mention here . . . David S. Greenberg tells me that the Jewish War Veterans of this area are holding a stag at the Christian Heurich Hospitality Hall Monday at 8:30 p. m., featuring boxing, wrestling, refreshments and celebrities galore. Price of admission is all the toys and canned goods you can lay hands on, to be distributed to needy families for Christmas . . . Mrs. Leonard Stein of 1622 Colonial ter., Arlington, Va., wishes to say "Thank you" to the two unidentified boys who picked up her dog after it was struck by a hit-and-run driver. And to the attendant at the Arlington Animal Hospital who saved the pup's life—and then refused to accept any compensation . . . Laura Lee Sparks of 2711 30th st. se. and Mrs. T. B. Mechling of 218 S. Royal st., Alexandria, Va., are avid "Mark Trail" fans, but wonder how the circus people knew that Andy's name is Andy. That's something that never occurred to me—and possibly not to Cartoonist Ed Dodd, either . . . A restaurant convention at the Statler the other day introduced a new-fangled machine that turns out square hamburgers. But at our house we prefer ground round steak.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

A Child's Wisdom on the A-Bomb

By Drew Pearson

When new Price Director Mike Di Salle conferred with the President recently, he told him that the subject of the atom bomb was a topic of lively conversation around the large Di Salle dinner table. One night, said the ex-mayor of Toledo, he polled his five children on whether or not the atom bomb should be used.

Di Salle

Each one of them said "yes"—except his younger daughter, Dianne, aged 10.

"Why do you say it shouldn't be used?" Di Salle asked.

"Well," replied Dianne thoughtfully, "if we used it, somebody might also use it against us."

The President smiled at the story.

"That young daughter of yours," he said, "makes a lot more sense about the atom bomb than a number of people I've been talking with recently."

Publicity Pay

Three headline-minded Congressmen—Clare Hoffman, George Dondero and Paul Shafer, all Michigan Republicans — have discovered a sure-fire way to get their names in the papers back home. They simply pay off, with the taxpayers' money, the reporter who writes the news.

In fact, all three keep the same Michigan reporter, or his wife, on the public payroll.

He is Thomas L. Munger, who writes for a string of small Michigan papers, including the Pontiac Press. He is carried on the payrolls of both Hoffman and Dondero, while his wife, Mayme Munger, is listed as an office clerk for Shafer. However, other Michigan Congressmen claim it is Mr. Munger, not Mrs. Munger, who works for Shafer, too.

This enterprising reporter, therefore, appears to be paid both by his newspapers and the Congressmen for writing about them. Hoffman pays $58 and Donero $100 per month to Mr. Munger, and Shafer authorizes another $190 per month for Mrs. Munger. Of course, these side salaries actually come out of the taxpayers' pockets.

Roll Call of Patriots

One important problem most people don't realize today is that of getting trained executives to give up the high salaries paid by private business, and work in Washington.

Every week various experts are invited to help out their country with the intricate problem of mobilization, but usually the answer is "no."

However, this column would like to pay tribute to the following men who have patriotically given up private jobs to help their country:

DR. WILLIAM L. LANGER, distinguished Harvard history professor and expert on Europe who helped the ultra-secret Office of Strategic Services during the war. He has now come back to Washington to work for Central Intelligence.

ROBERT LOVETT, Undersecretary of Defense. Lovett disregarded the advice of both his doctor and his family to help his old friend, Secretary of Defense Marshall.

WILLIAM H. JACKSON, law partner of Jock Whitney, who was Deputy Intelligence Chief for Gen. Omar Bradley in Europe. He has now given up a lush law practice to assist Gen. Walter Bedell Smith at Central Intelligence.

ANNA ROSENBERG, Assistant Secretary of Defense, who made a quarter of a million dollars a year as labor adviser to the Rockefellers, R. H. Macy and some of the biggest corporations in the country. Having come to Washington to help out in the manpower emergency, she faced unfair, scurrilous attacks on her patriotism by irresponsible people.

ALLEN DULLES, now working with Central Intelligence. A partner in the law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell, Dulles was formerly chief of the State Department's Near Eastern Division and helped direct OSS during the war.

NOTE—Few people realize it, but high-income individuals who step way down to a Government salary take an awful licking on their income tax. They must dig into their savings to pay taxes, because the Treasury check won't spread out the tax they have to pay on the high income of the year before.

McCarthyism

An Oregon war hero and a noted Catholic editor make some interesting comments regarding Senator Joe McCarthy and his wild charges.

Bill Exline, Oregon Senor Vice Commander of the Military Order of the Purple Heart, writes in the Purple Heart magazine, "his (McCarthy's) complete disregard for American principles in jurisprudence makes him potentially far more dangerous than those he accuses."

Associate Editor Francis Dowling hit equally hard in the Catholic weekly, "Commonweal:" "The voice of McCarthy was abroad in the land and it is now, as was in the beginning, a poisoned and fearful thing . . . We have known demagogues in our political history, but this is a special kind—an evil kind, a deliberate kind—it adds falseness to the already false. It is the spurious and the counterfeit."

War Note

Even before the Marines broke out of the Chinese trap and began counting their dead and wounded, actual American casualties were running 20,000 ahead of the official announcements. At the end of last week, the announced casualty list was 32,645. In contrast, the actual list still to be given the public was 53,212 dead, wounded and missing.
